SEPARATED 34 YEARS MEET AT MILESBURG

George F. Derr's Pathetic Reunion With Aged Sisters.

"ARE LIKE YOUNG GIRLS"

Broken In Health and Almost Blind He Could Not Distinguish Features of Mrs. Grushon and Mrs. Rowe, of Maryland —Happiest Days of His Life.

Separated for thirty-four years from their brother, George F. Derr, of Milesburg, and then making him a visit only to find him almost totally blind and broken down in health with an incurable disease, was the sad experience last week of Mrs. Katherine Grushon, of Creagerstown, Md., and Mrs. Elizabeth Rowe, of Uniontown, Md. Participating in the reunion which followed was Mrs. M. L. Derr, of McKeesport, a sister-in-law, who had not seen Mr. Derr for twenty-one years. The story is one as pathetic as it is novel.

Time and again a reunion of the sisters and brothers was planned, only to haye something turn up to interfere. Finally Mrs. Grushon and Mrs. Rowe went to McKeesport, where they were joined by Mrs. Derr, and the three started for Milesburg. When they arrived there it was to learn that their brother could barely distinguish their forms, so nearly blind had he become in the intervening years. To his eyes his sisters were the young girls as he had last seen them in Maryland. He could distinguished their voices, but that was all. Almost too happy for words Mr. Derr, telling of the incident to a reporter of "The Republican," said that the little reuuion had given him the happiest days of his life.

George F. Derr was born, in Maryland, sixty-seven years ago. In 1873 he removed to Cumberland county. In 1882 he located in Milesburg. When he parted with his sisters he little dreamed that so many years were to pass before they would meet again. They were young girls and he was a strong, healthy boy. When the long-proposed reunion finally was held it was to find all three approaching the mark of three-score years and ten.

"These are the happiest days of my life," said Mr. Derr to reporter of "The Republican." "I have lived my fill of life, now, having my sisters come back. I couldn't distinguish them; to me they were not old women, but the same young girls I left at home years ago. We had hoped to have a big celebration with their coming to see us, but my wife is ill and that is out of the question. However, we are having a very happy time among us and my sisters will stay a week or ten days longer."

Mr. Derr spoke lightly of his illness, so happy was he to have his sisters with him. Were it not for his advanced years and enfeebled health he would return with his sisters to the old homestead, in Maryland.

Reunion of 110th. Regiment.

Members of the 110th Pennsylvania Association are completing plans for the twenty-sixth annual reunion, which will be held here October 15. George W. Buck, of Altoona, secretary of the association, has sent official notices of the reunion to the several members. The 110th was one of the most valuable regiments in the First Division during the Civil War, seeing the hardest kind of service from '62 to '65. The regiment was recruited at Camp Crossman, Huntingdon county. Its members were taken chiefly from Centre, Blair, Clearfield and Huntingdon counties.

Illuminated Town Clock.

One of the best improvements contemplated in the remodeling of the Court House is an illuminated clock. This will replace the old clock, which has been keeping, or failing to keep, time these many years. The new clock will be fitted up with four large glass dials, and the lettering will be in plain numerals. At night the glass dials will be illuminated, thus enabling persons to ascertain the hour just as well as in broad daylight. The idea of an illuminated clock was suggested to the county commissioners by Mrs. James Clark, of East High Street.

Pleasant Gap Picnic.

Residents of Pleasant Gap held a picnic at Hecla Park, on Saturday, last. It was a delightful outing for the large crowd in attendance. During the afternoon there was a baseball game, at which Pleasant Gap was downed by Hublersburg, 7 to 2.

FALLS THROUGH BRIDGE

Threshing Machine Drops Into Creek Near Axe Mann.

John Yearick's threshing machine was too heavy for the old wooden bridge, which spans the creek on the road to State College, near Axe Mann, and on Friday afternoon, of last week, it crashed into the stream leading to the fish hatchery. It required the service of William Bilger, of Pleasant Gap, and several others, with a team of horses and double-block and tackle, to get the big machine out of the creek. The machine was not damaged, but the bridge was wrecked.

Mr. Yearick had been threshing at Rishel's, and about 4 o'clock in the afternoon was bringing his machine toward Bellefonte. He succeeded in getting the front wheels safely across, but when the heavier end of the machine came onto the bridge the old wooden supports gave way. Only the rear end of the machine dropped into the creek, but in order to remove the thresher without damage it was necessary to build an incline and slide the front end also into the stream. It required until midnight to get the machine onto the road, but Mr. Yearick was out threshing on Saturday as if nothing had happened.

Robert Corl.

Robert Corl, a well known and highly respected resident of Pleasant Gap died on Monday morning at 5 o'clock, after an extended illness. The funeral was held on Wednesday afternoon, at one o'clock, Rev. Mr. Sower, officiating. Interment was made at the Branch cemetery. Mr. Corl was a successful farmer, for many years living on the Shugert farm, at Pleasant Gap. For a time he resided at Linden Hall, removing to Boalsburg, and from there to Pleasant Gap. Mr. Corl was 83 years old, and is survived by one brother, Henry, residing in South Dakota, and three sons and two daughters, as follows: Robert, Mary and Nannie, living at home; James, of Bellefonte, and Charles, whose home is at Boalsburg.

Mrs. Jean Rich Sterner.

A peculiar and sad death was that, Saturday, last, of Mrs. Jean Rich Sterner, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. M. B. Rich, and well known in this place. Her father drove her to Charlton, where she expected to cross the river in a boat to the railroad station. The road had recently been plowed, and as Mrs. Sterner stepped out of the buggy she tripped and fell. She died a short time afterward, and at first it was thought that she had broken her neck by the fall. An examination by physicians disclosed that death was caused by heart failure. Mrs. Sterner was 28 years old and a gradute of Dickinson Seminary, at Williamsport. Her husband is Dr. Clarence B. Sterner, of Philadelphia.

Mrs. Andrew Morrison.

Mrs. Andrew Morrison, died at her home, on Howard street, on Friday at 2 o'clock, after a month's illness. Death was due to a complication of diseases, aggravated by a tumorous growth. She was the daughter of the late Richard Morgan, of Bellefonte, and was born on September 3, 1865. She is survived by her husband, Andrew Morrison, and by the following brothers and sisters: John W, and Charles Morgan, and Mrs. Charles Lockington, of Bellefonte, and Mrs. William Russell, of Hazelwood, Pittsburg. She was a member of the Episcopal church and a devoted christian wife. The funeral was held on Sunday.

Death of Joel Struble.

Joel Struble, an old and well known resident of Centre County, died at 7.30 o'clock, on last Thursday morning, at his farm, near Zion. He was 72 years old, had been ill with rheumatism for about six years. He was the last of the older generation of Struble brothers. The funeral was held at 2.30 o'clock, on Saturday, Rev. Dr. Ambrose M. Schmidt, officiating.

A. C. Musser.

A. C. Musser, a well known resident of Millheim, died at his home, at that place, on Monday morning. He had been ill, with paralysis, for five years or more. He was about 61 years old.

Girl Falls Into Race.

While picking wild flowers, at Crider's Lumber yard, on Tuesday, Catharine Rine, slipped and fell into the race that runs by the lumber yard and which furnishes water power for Gamble, Gheen & Co's, flour mill. The child's screams attracted Thomas Kennedy, brakeman on the local freight, who ran across the bridge and by the merest chance succeeded in the pulling her out by the hair.

COURT HOUSE CONTRACT AWARDED FOR $33,772

Gehret and Lambert, Bellefonte Firm, Lowest Bidder.

TO BE COMPLETED JAN. 1

Also Received Contract for Marble Floors, To Cost $1560—Seven Bids Were Filed With County Commissioners—Expect to Start Work Monday.

The contract for the proposed improvements to the Court House was awarded by the County Commissioners, on Monday. Gehret & Lambert, a Bellefonte firm, captured the work, their bid, $33,772, being the lowest of the seven entered. To the same firm was awarded the contract for constructing marble floors in the corridor of the old building and also in the second story of the old and new buildings. This contract calls for $1,560. Work on the proposed improvements will be begun on Monday morning, of next week. The contract specifies that it shall be completed not later than five months from August 1, or January1.

Quite a crowd of interested spectators and contractors were in attendance when the bids were formerly opened, shortly after 2 o'clock, in the office of Commissioners Woodring, Zimmerman and Dunlap. Clement Dale, solicitor to the commissioners, was present and recorded the bids as they were opened and read. Owing to the manner in which the several bids were drawn up no one was able to tell at first just which firm's figure was the lowest. This was due to the fact that the specifications called for separate contracts for the marble floors in the corridor. Later in the day it was announced that the bid of Gehret Lambert was the lowest and that the firm had been awarded the contract. The several bids presented were as follow:

Gehret & Lambert, Bellefonte,	$33,772
Metzger & Wells, Philadelphia,	33,882
Kenyon & Hart, Clearfield,	34,938
Thomas M. Seeds, Jr. Phila.,	35,440
J. Richard Lutz, Bellefonte,	37,884
Henry T. Lowry, State College,	41,375
A. Raymond Raff, Philadelphia,	43,164

Several of the bids were for the work, complete. This was the case with the bid of Henry T. Lowry, J. Richard Lutz and Kenyon & Hart. A. Raymond Raff's bid for the marble floors was $1,795.40, while that of Thomas M. Seeeds, Jr., was for 80 cents the square foot.

According to the specifications the Court House will be extended 10 feet, on either side, and 42 feet in the rear. In order to complete the contract on time Gehret & Lambert will, where found necessary, put men to work on day and night shifts.

MEET AT STATE COLLEGE

Annual Gathering of State Grange Will be Held Dec. 21--24.

State College has been selected as the place for the annual meeting of the State Grange, Patrons of Husbandry, December 21 to 24. William T. Creasy, master of the State Grange, predicts that the meeting will be exceptionally interesting and that it will be largely attended.

This year's meeting is called a few days later than usual because at that time the students will be at home on their Christmas vacation. Another reason for the change was that the annual farmer's week will be held the week following the grange sessions. Many farmers who will be attracted to the convention will, no doubt, remain for the "farmers' week."

The City Band.

The City Band is the name of a new organization of musicians, that has just been formed in Bellefonte. The band is composed of, thirty--five players from Bellefonte, Milesburg and Coleville. It is their idea to develop a concert band, with the ultimate aim of enlisting as the Fifth Regiment Band, Second Brigade. At present the band practices nightly at the armory, and band concerts on the public streets, are promised in the near future. The officers of the band are as follows: Philip F. Garbrick, Pres.; Charley Stover, Vice Pres.; William Royer, Sec.; Edward Zimmerman, Asst. Sec.; Clarence Rhoades, Treas.; Henry Kline, Mgr.; Samuel Bryant, Director; Henry Brown, Asst. Director, and William Rine, Librarian.

Send us $1 and we will send you all the news in "The Republican" each week for one year.

NEW STORAGE QUARTERS

Pennsylvania Match Co. Leases Meadow Near Old Nail Works.

To keep pace with its rapidly growing business, the Pennsylvania Match Company has leased the meadow, from the McCalmont lime kiln to the old nail-works. for use in storing lumber. A railroad siding will be erected, thus making available storage facilities for over 4,000,000 feet of lumber.

Additional storage room has been made necessary by the proposed extension of the Pennsylvania Match Company's plant.

Several new buildings will be erected, the first being an extension to the chemical department and machine shop. This buliding will be 40x60 feet. Work on it will be under way in the course of the next few weeks.

Heime—Hess.

Clarence L. Heime, of Spring Mills, and Edna M. Hess, of Lewistown, were married at the Lutheran parsonage, Centre Hall, Saturday evening, at 8 o'clock.

The groom is a son of Philip Heime, of Spring Mills, and is baggage master on one of the trains on the L. & T., with headquarters at Lewisburg. He is a young man held in high regard by those who know him. The bride is a native of Sunbury, but recently removed with her parents to Lewistown.

Gingery--Weaver.

A pretty wedding was that on Saturday, last, at the home of W. B. Gingery, of Port Matilda, when their daughter, Pearl, was married to Paul Weaver. Squire Williams performed the ceremony. Mr. Weaver is a son of the late Thomas Weaver. The newly wedded couple probably will reside with Mr. Weaver's mother, at Port Matilda.

Michtley--Beck.

Miss Sarah E. Michtley and Lewis H. Beck, both of Snydertown, were married last Thursday at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Ira C. Michtley. The groom is a son of Mr. and Mrs. Benjamin F. Beck. The ceremony was performed by Rev. L. M. Mack.

An Excited Broncho.

The spectacle of a broncho, crazed with fear, furnished a great deal of excitement for the crowd at the Diamond, last Saturday night. Jared Houser, who resides in Pleasant Gap, drove into town with his western broncho, and, having some shopping to attend to, tied his horse to the boiler-shaped hitching post, in front of Montgomery & Company's store. The horse, which is just newly imported from the west, is not thoroughly broken, and when an automobile passed, became violently excited. It kicked the harness to pieces and becoming more frenzied jumped over the hitching post. It then began to kick the iron hitching post with lightning-like rapidity, and would have broken away from the buggy, had it not been for the timely strong arm work of Charles Smith, of Bishop street.

Reunion of Poorman Family.

The reunion of the Poorman families will be held Saturday, September 4, in Kohlbecker's grove, near Milesburg. Descendents of the Poormans are cordially invited, as well as all others who may wish to attend. In extending the invitations J. Edward Confer and J. E. Rickard, the corresponding secretaries, expreess the desire to make the reunion one long to be remembered.

John I. Potter Ill.

The many friends of John I. Potter, one of the most genial and popular citizens of Bellefonte, will learn with regret of his illness, at his home on East Linn Street. It is more than a pleasure to us to be able to note that his condition, at this writing, is somewhat improved and that he is resting comfortably.

Farmers' Institutes Arranged.

Deputy Secretary of Agriculture Martin has announced the schedule of farmers' institutes for the coming year, which include the following for Centre County: Aaronsburg, February 14 and 15; Centre Hall, February 16 and 17; Boalsburg, February 18 and 19. The chairmanship is vacant.

House Burned at Scotia.

A double dwelling-house, at Scotia, was completely destroyed by fire, on Thursday, of last week. The house was owned by the Bellefonte Furnace Company, and was occupied by Ross Grove and Andrew Tomco, neither of whom had any insurance.

Drove Horse to Death.

Two heartless men hired a horse and buggy from Duke's livery, at Altoona, on Saturday, and then drove the animal to death. It was found near the residence of Dr. R. G. H. Hayes. The men disappeared.

MR. FORTNEY WRITES TO "THE REPUBLICAN"

He Vigorously Defends Proposed $33,000 School Loan.

URGES ITS APPROVAL

Declares Board Is Right in Planning Permanent Betterment of Schools Even If More Costly than Was First Estimated—Borough Finances.

D. F. Fortney, a member of the school board, has addressed a letter to "The Republican," in which he refers to the editorial in this paper, of last week, discussing the proposed $33,000 loan to complete the new school building, at the corner of Linn and Allegheny Streets. Mr. Fortney's letter follows:

To "THE REPUBLICAN:"

The editorial in "The Republican," of last week, is ground upon which to say something on school matters. The people are entitled to all the information and discussion the question will admit. That the building will cost more than it was originally intended is true. After the board got the question well under way it became clear that to erect a building smaller than the one now under way would give to the schools but few of the advantages needed and that the schools would soon again be in a crowded condition. The board thought it best, therefore, to construct a good, large building. In this it is clearly right.

Those who criticise do not seem to realize that they will get, in all this building is to cost, a good substantial building which will be well lighted, ventilated, and warmed according to the latest and best methods obtainable. This of itself will be of endless value to the health, happiness, and comfort of the children in the schools, possibly among them the children of those who criticise most. A school building so equipped saves much in doctor bills.

I have been a member of the school board for a number of years, and I wish to say a word about the school district's financial affairs.

During all the years that I have been on the board it has honestly pinched and scrimped in school affairs to lighten the burden of taxation to the people of the borough in the hope that the borough debt would be reduced, and the millage for that purpose coming down the millage for school purposes could be increased to meet the reasonable demands of the district without burdening those who foot the bill unduly. For this reason the old debt of 1870 and 1871 was carried along and once and a while reduced $1000. By this means it was reduced from $32,000 to $25,000 and in 1900 all outstanding bonds were called in and refunded at 3½ per cent, and a sinking fund created for the special purpose of applying to this debt. There is now in this fund with cash on hand and what is due the fund, from levies made, which belong to it, $5,000, which by the terms of the bonds is to be applied to the payment of bond, to that amount, in 1910.

The school authorities have been unusually moderate in their levies for school purposes and always so because of the borough debt; not because of the debt of the school district. To have waited longer on the reduction of the borough debt would have been useless.

Turn a page and think for a moment. Even those that criticise will concede that better school facilities were absolutely necessary. How were they to be obtained and by whom furnished? The law puts the duty on the board. The building of a small house would not have cured the evil.

And the real question was: Will the board size up and do what ought to be done? This I believe it did honestly and fairly. The board has planned not only a substantial building but in the interior arrangements it will be as convenient and commodious as it can well be made. On this I write with some knowledge. In all the years I have been a member of the board I have taken every opportunity to visit and examine school buildings. During the time (five or six years) the question of building has been under consideration I have been in towns smaller, as large, and larger than this place, sometimes at the instance of the board, and at others following my own desire to see the schools and buildings. I have carefully examined many school buildings, especially their interior arrangements and inquired the cost. The cost largely depended on when they were built. If built when prices were low the cost ran any where from $25,000 to $45,000 and then it was stated the same building now would cost from $40,000 to $60,000 and $70,000 and that with only plain red bricks. Considering the prices of all building material the cost of the building under way of construction is very moderate. The bare building foundation and all will not cost over $47,000. Some new furniture and other furnishings will be needed. Then it would be a blur and a disgrace to the town to leave the lot ungraded. This will cost something, so that the entire cost including the heating apparatus will be about the amount the board has asked for. The citizens can be assured that not a dollar more than is needed will be expended but the board should have enough to properly complete the job.

Some few are in distress and bitterly criticise the board for taking down the stone building. This building was no longer safe, and it was not, and could not be made to preserve the health and comfort of the children, who attended

BELLEFONTE WINS

Trounces Jersey Shore 9 To 1—Game Winds Up In Dispute.

Bellefonte trounced the strong Jersey Shore baseball club, yesterday, the score being 9 to 1. The visiting team quit in the last half of the eighth inning after a dispute. With two men out, Jersey Shore contended that Otto, for Bellefonte, had caught a fly on the bound. Dr. Dale, the umpire, decided otherwise, and Jersey Shore left the field.

At no time was Jersey Shore a factor in the game, Bellefonte putting up the swiftest kind of baseball. That the home club has at last struck its gait was the verdict of the crowd, and more victories are predicted. On Tuesday Bellefonte lost to Tyrone, 4--2, due largely to the fact that she was trying out a new pitcher. In yesterday's game Martz pitched beautifully. The detailed score follows:

Two out in 8th inning when Jersey Shore left field. Umpire, Dr. Dale. Time 1hr. 37.

Bellefonte lost to Lock Haven, 1-0, in a ten-inning game, at this place, on Friday afternoon, of last week. No more exciting game could be asked, and at times the playing equalled that on the diamonds of the big leagues. The attendance was more encouragingly large than that at any game played on the home grounds. On Friday night the benefit at the Scenic netted the club management $57. A splendid double- [illegible] and Miss Helen Schaffer rendered several pretty duets and a male quartette livened things up with some good songs, in which the audience joined in the chorus. The way the people turned out to help the boys along indicated that Bellefonte wants a winning team and is ready to give the proper support.

Bellefonte should have won the game which Lock Haven finally captured. In her half of the ninth inning Bellefonte had Otto on third base, a man on second and but one out. Pierce batted out a fly, which was caught. Otto became confused and failed to score. This ended Bellefonte's chances to win, for in the tenth Lock Haven led off with a two-bagger and finally scored the one run of thegame. Bellefonte succeeded in getting a man as far as third base but the side went out on a fly to deep centre.

Who is Your Girl?

The management of the Bellefonte Baseball Club have arranged a popular contest for the game here with Jersey Shore, August 14.

Friends of the game have offered a handsome gold watch, valued at $25 to be contested for by the young ladies of the town. The several contestants will be given tickets good for the game of August 14th, and the one selling the most tickets will be awarded the watch.

These tickets will be sold at the regular price of 25cts each. Should the game of August 14 be postponed for any reason the tickets will be good for the next regularly scheduled league game.

The citizens of the town will not only be offered an opportunity to help their favorite contestant to secure a valuable prize, but will be enabled to substantially aid the ball team without any great outlay. A list of the contestants and their daily score will be posted in the windows of Blair's Jewelry Store.

Sale of Western Horses.

Edward Hugler, the well known dealer in horses, has arranged for a sale of thirty range horses at the Haag House stables, at one o'clock, Wednesday, August 11. The car will arrive about Monday, August 9, and the horses, which are from three to five years old, will be at the Haag House stables for inspection from that time until the hour of the sale. All of the horses are unbroken and bred from good stock. In the judgment of Mr. Hugler they will make good general purpose horses. The sale will be held, Wednesday August 11, rain or shine.

Presbyterian Picnic.

The annual picnic of the congregation of the Presbyterian Church was held, yesterday, at Hecla Park. Quite a large crowd was in attendance, the day was ideal for such an outing and all present had a delightful time.

The Man From Home

By BOOTH TARKINGTON and HARRY LEON WILSON

A Novelization of the Play of the Same Name

Copyright, 1909, by American Press Association

SYNOPSIS.

The preceding chapters of this remarkably interesting story relate how Daniel Vorhees Pike, an Indiana lawyer, hears that his ward, Ethel Granger-Simpson, is to be married abroad to the son of an English earl. Her father was his nearest friend and he has long loved the girl. Pike goes abroad to arrange the business matters connected with her marriage. Meanwhile Ethel and her brother, Horace, have become anglomaniacs and spend much of their father's fortune in travel and entertaining. Becoming intimate with Lady Creech, the Earl of Hawcastle, his son, Almeric St. Aubyn, and Comtesse de Champigny, an adventuress, Ethel promises to marry the son because she craves a title. The Earl of Hawcastle, needing money, wants his son to get a large settlement at his marriage to Ethel. An escaped Russian bandit is located at Sorrento, and the comtesse fears he is one Ivanoff. Almeric tells his father Ethel has accepted him. Horace agrees to persuade his sister to settle $750,000 on Almeric.

"Well," he laughed, "perhaps in those things I am American, but in others I fancy I should be thought something else, shouldn't I?"

She laughed openly at him now, but earnestly withal, and said:

"You are a debonair man of the world, and yet you are still American in that you are abominably rich. The settlement—such matter as that, over which a Frenchman, an Italian, might hesitate—you laugh. Such matter as £150,000—you set it aside, you laugh. You say, 'Oh, yes; take it!'"

For a moment she feared that Horace would fall over the low parapet, so white did his face become and then so flushed, but the boy was game all through. The generations of simple Indiana stock came to his rescue, and he steeled himself with an effort and replied quietly:

"A hundred and fifty thousand pounds! Why, that's seven hundred and fifty thous—I say, countess, she couldn't use the money to better advantage!"

There was [illegible] admiration in the Frenchwoman's glance this time, for she had lost none of the little byplay, and she admired the courage of the youngster. So she said:

"My friend, how wise you are!"

As she spoke she turned in time to see Ethel come down the steps of the hotel with a book beneath her arm and ran to her, clasping her in her arms and kissing her.

CHAPTER VII.

SNUBBED!

"LARGESSE, sweet Countess of Hawcastle!" the woman cried. "Largesse! And au revoir! Adieu! I leave you with your dear brother!"

She ran quickly up the steps with a flirt of her parasol, and Horace took his sister's hand with tears in his eyes.

"Dear old sis! Dear old pal!" he said, and she turned a radiant look upon him.

"Isn't it glorious, Hoddy?" she said with exalted tone. "Look!" and held up the book she carried. "It's Burke's 'Peerage.' And Froissart's 'Chronicles'—I've been reading it all over again. The St. Aubyns were at Crecy and Agincourt, and St. Aubyn will be my name."

"I had him, you know, I rather think, didn't I?"

"They want it to be your name soon, sis," he answered her.

For a moment she turned away and then looked at him straight in the eyes.

"You're fond of Almeric, aren't you, Hoddy? You admire him, don't you, dear?"

"Certainly. Why, think of all he represents, sis!"

"Ah, yes, Hoddy! Crusader's blood flows in his veins. It is the nobility that must be within him that I have plighted my troth to. I am ready to marry him when they wish!"

Horace sighed.

"It will be as soon as the settlement is made and arranged. It will take about all your share of the estate, sis, but it's worth it—a hundred and fifty thousand pounds."

Ethel lifted the book to the level of her eyes.

"What better use could be made of a fortune, Hoddy, than to maintain the state and high condition of so ancient a house?"

He looked at her affectionately and took her hand.

"It does seem impossible that we were born in Indiana, doesn't it, sister?" And the tones of his voice were those of incredulity.

She smiled at him fondly.

"But isn't it good that the pater 'made his pile,' as the Americans say, and let us come over here while we were young to find the nobler things, Hoddy—the nobler things?"

"The nobler things—the nobler things! Why, sis, when old Hawcastle dies I'll be saying offhand, you know, 'My sister, the Countess of Hawcastle'"—

For a moment Ethel remained thoughtful and then turned to her brother.

"You don't imagine that father's friend, this old Mr. Pike, will be—will be queer, do you?"

"Well, the governor himself was rather raw, you know. This is probably a harmless old chap, easy to handle."

"I wish I knew. I shouldn't like Almeric's family to think we had queer connections of any sort, and he might turn out to be quite shockingly American. I—I couldn't bear that, Hoddy!"

There was a note of genuine pathos in her voice, and her brother responded instantly:

"Then keep him out of the way. That's simple enough," he said. "None of them, except the solicitor, need see him."

Almost in a burst like an eruption there came an uproar outside the gates beyond the hotel—wild laughter, riotous cheering and the notes of the tarentella played by mandolins and guitar, then more shouts and cheers and cries of "Bravo, Americano!" and "Yanka Dooda!" Horace ran to the [illegible] and the uproar continued. Ethel stood by one of the tables, amazement written on her features, and turned to her brother as he came back shaking his head.

"What is that?" she asked tremulously. Lady Creech, all in a flutter, entered from the hotel. At a glance one would set her down for an aristocrat. There was no doubt of it. From the topmost tip of her white hair to the toe of her solid shoe she was an aristocrat.

"One of your fellow countrymen, my dear," she said to Ethel. "Your Americans are really too"—

"Not my Americans, Lady Creech!" said Ethel spiritedly.

"Not our, you know. One could hardly say that, now!" reiterated Horace.

Almeric entered, at once laughing and beating his boot with his crop. Almost exhausted with his mirth, he threw himself into a chair and burst out:

"Oh, I say, what a go! Motor car breaks down on the way here. One of the Johnnies, a German chap, discharges the chauffeur, and the other Johnny—one of your Yankee chaps, Ethel—hires two silly little donkeys, like rabbits, you know, to pull the machine. Then, as they can't make it, you know, he puts himself in the straps with them and proceeds, attended by the populace. Ha, ha!"

He laughed long and loudly.

"I went up to this Yankee chap, I mean to say—he was pulling and tugging along, you see—and I said, 'There you are, three of you in a row, aren't you?' meaning him and the two donkeys, you see, Ethel, and all he could answer was that he 'picked the best company in sight.' No meaning to it, I had him, you know, I rather think, didn't I?"

At this moment Lord Hawcastle entered with a bundle of newspapers under his arm and proceeded to settle himself at one of the tables. Almeric approached him.

"English papers, governor? I'll take the pink un. I'm off." And he picked up the tinted sheet as he spoke. Ethel came up to him and touched him on the arm.

"Going for a stroll, Almeric? Would you like me to go with you, dear?"

He looked at her vacantly for an instant and then stammered:

"Well, I rather thought I'd have a quiet bit of reading, you know."

Ethel drew back quickly and said in a very small voice:

"Oh, I beg your pardon."

Then she sat down hurriedly by Lord Hawcastle.

CHAPTER VIII.

THE AMERICAN.

THE clatter without continued unabated, and Ethel and the countess walked back to the terrace rampart to stand looking out over the glorious bay.

Horace, still in the seventh heaven of delighted realization, took the Daily Mail from the table on which the earl had thrown it and seated himself to read beside Lady Creech, who was already deep in the Church Register. The earl had buried himself in the Pall Mall Gazette and was apparently oblivious to such minor details as an Italian peasant row.

But to Horace in his highly strung condition of nerves the uproar was aggravating, and he called to Mariano, who was busily setting the table again:

"Mariano, how long is this noise to continue?"

The maitre d'hotel shrugged his expressive shoulders and replied:

"How can I know, m'sieu? We can do nothing."

Michele, who was assisting his chief, smiled covertly at the young man.

"The populace they will not be depart so long as there shall be the chance once again to observe the North American who pulled the automobile with the donkeys!"

"Merci!" cried Mariano, with vigor. "He have confuse me. He have confuse everybody. He will not be content with the dejeuner until he have the ham and the egg, and he will have the egg cooked upon but one of two sides, and how in the name of the heaven can we tell which of these two sides?"

Mariano was about to continue his grumbling complaint when from the doorway of the hotel there came an interruption. The courier who had spoken with him earlier in the morning stood there and voiced but one word.

"Garcon!" he said softly. But it was like the command of a cavalry officer in its effect, for instantly the maitre d'hotel and his aid stood at attention like trained veterans. The earl evidently was not too deeply immersed to catch the sudden silence, for he looked up from his paper and observed:

"Upon my soul! Who's this?"

Mariano did not turn his head nor relax his attitude of stiff attention, but answered obsequiously:

"It is the Herr von Grollerhagen, a German gentleman, milord."

Hawcastle turned with an amused smile to Horace.

"The man who owns the automobile. Probably made a fortune in sausage."

From within the hotel there came the tones of a heavy though cultivated voice declaiming quietly:

"Nein, nein, Ribiere! 'S macht nichts!"

And instantly there came down the steps the German gentleman aforesaid. He was tall and of a commanding presence. He wore a grayish beard and an automobile cap that half concealed the eyes that burned with the authority of generations beneath. Withal it was a kindly face, and, though there was a stern command in the figure, there was genial humor and even tenderness too. By no authority could he have been considered well dressed. His clothes seemed rather to have been thrown on negligently.

The little party at the table regarded him with hostility, and Lady Creech turned up her aristocratic nose.

"What a dreadful person!" she said and turned again to her paper.

The German walked sedately across the terrace to the table where the two servitors still stood at attention and lifted his hand in a curt half military salute in acknowledgment of their bow.

"See to my American friend," he said.

"What a terrible person!" remarked Lady Creech again, and Hawcastle bent toward her.

"Undoubtedly, but he speaks English. So be careful."

"So many objectionable people do," commented the crusty dame.

Herr von Grollerhagen turned smilingly to Mariano.

"My American friend desires his national dish."

Mariano bowed.

"Yes, Herr von Grollerhagen," replied Mariano deferentially. "He will have the eggs on but one of two sides and the ham fried, so he go to cook it himself."

Von Grollerhagen smiled, when from without the gates came a shout of amusement and wild laughter. Mariano instantly bowed and ran toward the hotel.

"Ha!" he said eagerly. "He return from the kitchen with that national dish."

Michele emerged from the hotel walking backward and carrying a covered dish, while Ethel turned with a little shudder of disgust to the countess.

"How horrible!" she said, and the Frenchwoman patted her shoulder reassuringly.

Immediately following the servitor came Pike, the same self possessed Pike, clad in a linen duster and a straw hat that was decorated with a bright ribbon. If there was anything distinctive about him it was his scarf, which was of that type known as Windsor and much affected by artists in the east and every one in the west. He carried a towel with him and dropped it in one hand as he glanced about.

"Law!" he observed, startled, but amused. "I didn't know there were folks here. Reckon you'll have to excuse me. Here, son!" he called, tossing the towel into Michele's hands and walking over to the table. Hawcastle, Lady Creech and Horace stared unbelievingly. Ethel hid her face, with another little shudder, as Pike, without removing his dust coat, sat down opposite the German.

"You are a true patriot," laughed Von Grollerhagen. "You allow no profane hand to cook your national dish. I trust you will be as successful with that wicked motor of mine."

Pike laughed heartily.

"Lord bless your soul, doc, I've put a self binder together after a pony engine had bucked it halfway through a brick depot," said Pike genially, tucking his napkin inside the collar of his shirt and falling to on the ham and eggs. At the table where sat the Hawcastle party there were expressions of pained agony.

"You have studied mechanics at the university, then?" went on Von Grollerhagen. "Is it not so?"

"University!" returned Pike. "Not much! On the old man's farm."

Hawcastle turned at once to Horace.

"Without any disrespect to you, my dear fellow, what terrific bounders most of your fellow countrymen are!"

Horace mentally writhed under the veiled taunt, but turned quickly with an assent in effect.

"Do you wonder that sis and I have emancipated ourselves?" he asked, and the noble earl, with a softened glance as he thought of the dollars, replied blandly, "Not at all, my dear boy," and turned once more to his paper.

Von Grollerhagen glanced at the three with slight amusement and held out the caviare to Pike.

"Can I persuade you to try one of my national dishes," he asked—"caviare?"

"Caviare?" replied Pike. "I've heard of it, but I thought it was Russian."

"It is also German," answered the other, recovering himself from the start he had given. "Will you not?"

Daniel looked him straight in the eye quizzically.

"I'd never get into the legislature again if any of the boys heard of it," he remarked, "but I guess I'm far enough from home to take a few chances."

Quite slowly and hesitatingly he placed some of the caviare in his mouth and then turned a vacant and pained look upon the German. The latter smiled and observed quickly:

"You do not like it? I am sorry. Here! A taste of the vodka will destroy the caviare."

Mariano quickly filled a glass and passed it to Daniel, who seized it eagerly. This time he sat bolt upright in the chair and exhibited real distress. Then he quickly seized another forkful of the caviare and ate it hurriedly.

"But I thought you did not like the caviare?" said the German.

Daniel breathed quickly for an instant, and the flush died from his face.

"That was to take away the taste of the vodka," he said weakly, and Von Grollerhagen lifted his head and laughed heartily.

"I lift my hat to you, my friend," he said, and Pike looked at him genially.

"You never worked on a farm, did you, doc?" he asked, and the German admitted that such a pleasure had been denied him.

"I guess that's right," went on Daniel reflectively. "Talk about things to drink! Harvest time and the women folks coming out from the house with a two gallon jug of ice cold buttermilk."

Horace shuddered convulsively, and Von Grollerhagen asked:

"You still enjoy those delights?"

"Not since I moved up to our county seat and began to practice law, ten years ago," Pike answered. "Things don't taste the same in the city."

"Then you do not like your city?"

"Like it! Why, sir, for public buildings and architecture I wouldn't trade our state insane asylum for the worst ruined ruin in Europe—not for hygiene and real comfort."

"And your people?"

"The best on earth. Why, out my way folks are neighbors!"

Horace rattled his paper sharply and glanced angrily at the disturber of his harmony. The German went on.

"But you have no leisure class," he objected, and Daniel smiled.

"We've got a pretty good sized colored population," he replied.

The German lifted his hand protestingly.

"I mean no aristocracy—no great old families such as we have, that go back to the middle ages."

Pike laughed seriously, if one might imagine such a thing, and returned instantly:

"Well, I expect if they go back that far they might just as well sit down and stay there. No, sir; the poor man in my country don't have to pay any taxes to keep up a lot of useless kings and earls and first grooms of the bedchamber and second ladies in waiting and I don't know what all. If anybody wants our money for nothing, he's got to show energy enough to steal it. Doc, I wonder a man like you doesn't emigrate."

"Bravo!" cried Von Grollerhagen, with keen delight, while Hawcastle turned with an angry gesture to Horace.

"Your countryman does seem to be rather down on us!"

Horace flushed with mortification and returned:

"This fellow is distinctly of the lower orders. We should cut him as completely in the States as here."

CHAPTER IX.

RECOGNIZED.

THE German was frankly enjoying his guest's conversation and quaint mannerisms and went on:

"I wonder you make this long journey, my friend, instead of spending your holiday at home."

Pike looked up in astonishment.

"Holiday! Why, I never even had time to go to Niagara falls. I'm here on business."

Ethel, who was still standing by the countess, looked at her friend with pained entreaty, and Horace, catching Lady Creech's basilisk eye fixed on him, reddened with mortification.

Daniel carefully folded his napkin and sat back.

"I expect it's about time for me to go and find the two young folks I've come to look after," he said.

"You are here for a duty, then?" asked the German quietly.

"I shouldn't be surprised if that was the name for it," answered Pike, rising. "Yes, sir; all the way from Indiana!"

Both Ethel and Horace started in horrified amazement and looked at each other with stricken terror on their faces. If this should—

"I—I can't stand this. I shall go for a stroll," said Horace hysterically and rose from the table, while Hawcastle looked at Pike fixedly.

"By Jove!" he said slowly.

"I expect, doc," went on Pike calmly, "that I won't be able to eat with you this evening. You see—you see I've come a mighty long way to look after her, and she—that is, they—will probably want me to have supper with them."

"Reason! Why, yes. I'm her guardian!"

The horror was closing fast around the other party, and they simply stared.

"Do not trouble for me," observed the German. "Your young people—they have a villa?"

"No," answered Pike, with a smile. "They're right here in this hotel."

Horace, with fear lending wings to his scattered senses, sprang to his feet and began to walk toward the grove. Pike looked up.

"I'd better ask," he said, and then, observing Horace, went on addressing him: "Hey, there! Can you"— He stared as the young man, paying no attention, proceeded on his way. Pike raised his voice.

"Excuse me, son, ain't you an American?" As Horace paid no more attention he turned to Mariano. "Here, waiter! Tell that gentleman I want to speak to him!"

Mariano sprang after the retreating Horace.

"Pardon, m'sieu, the gentleman, he wish to speak to you."

Horace whirled in an angry flash.

"What gentleman?" he demanded, and Pike regarded him calmly.

"I thought from your looks," he proceeded quietly, "you might be an American."

Horace planted himself squarely before his interrogator.

"Are you speaking to me?" he demanded haughtily.

"I shouldn't be surprised," said Pike genially. "Ain't you an American?"

"I happen to have been born in the States," replied Horace aggressively, and Pike smiled quizzically.

"Well, that was luck," he commented, and as Horace turned again to go he said: "Hold on a minute! I'm looking for some Americans here, and I expect you know 'em—boy and girl named Simpson!"

Horace flushed deeply to the roots of his hair.

"Is there any possibility you mean Granger-Simpson?" he asked, with elaborate sarcasm, but this was lost on Daniel.

"No, sir; just plain Simpson. Granger's their middle name. That's for old Jed Granger, grandfather on their mother's side. I want to see 'em both, but it's the girl I'm really looking for."

"Will you be good enough to state any possible reason why Miss Granger-Simpson should see you?" and Pike started in genuine astonishment.

"Reason!" he reiterated. "Why, yes. I'm her guardian!"

The effect of this simple statement was terrifying. Ethel reeled dizzily and was supported by Mme. de Champigny. The earl rose to his feet, and Horace staggered back.

"What!" he cried.

"Yes, sir," went on Pike—"Daniel Voorhees Pike, attorney at law, Kokomo, Ind."

Horace fell back from him in horrified amazement.

"I shall ask her," he began weakly and shamefacedly, "if she will consent to an interview."

Pike looked at him in amazement in his turn.

"Interview!" he said. "Why, I want to talk to her!"

Hawcastle, with some of his finer feelings aroused, picked up his sister-in-law with his eyes, much as a clever hostess picks up her feminine guests at dinner, and arose, turning to Ethel.

"This shall make no difference to us, my child," he said and, turning sharply, took Lady Creech by the arm and left the terrace. Pike looked at Horace pityingly.

"Don't you understand?" he said. "I'm her guardian!"

For a fleeting instant Horace stared at him and then dropped his chin and walked away.

"I shall never hold up my head again," he said.

The sudden horror of the revelation that Horace had drawn forth bore down upon Ethel's mind with a crushing weight.

To her artificialized understanding the disgrace was more than she could ever hope to bear, and Horace's expressed thought that he should never be able to hold up his head again was but a vivification of her own.

Surely it would have been bad enough, she told herself, if this fearful thing had come upon them privately, but to have it appear in the full light of day and in the very hearing of the family of the man she was about to marry was too cruel.

And with an inward groan she leaned for a moment against the terrace wall where the countess had left her. When the first astonishment had passed and she had time to realize what had occurred, events that had seemed but fleeting impressions rose up before her in all their vivid nakedness. Mme. de Champigny had looked at her with astute contempt, she was sure, and she dimly remembered seeing the look of horrified amazement upon the patrician features of the Earl of Hawcastle.

Then, with an awakened resentment, the fighting blood of the sturdy plebeian Simpson stock, the stock that had upheld its end in the battle against oppression in several wars, came back to her with a rush, and she decided to see this awful man and give him to understand that he must go away at once and never insult her again by his uncouth and vulgar presence. Such business as had to be transacted could be done through an intermediary.

With a bracing of her spirit she stepped forward resolutely and came up close behind Pike as he stood with drooping jaw gazing in perplexity after the retreating Horace. Ethel cast a look of loathing upon the straight back of the guardian of her peace and ground her little boot heel into the stone flagging. She glanced up and saw that the common German was looking at Pike with grave sympathy and even understanding, and instantly she hated him for it. Then she saw him take his cap from the obsequious Mariano and turn away. When he had gone she said in a low voice:

"I am Miss Granger-Simpson."

"I AM MISS GRANGER-SIMPSON."

THE BLIND POSTMAN.

An Exciting Game That Can Be Played by a Large Party.

The exciting game of "post" may be played by an unlimited number and is particularly adapted for a large party. One of the players, called "the postman," has his eyes bandaged, as in blind man's buff; another volunteers to fill the office of "postmaster general," and all the rest seat themselves round the room.

At the commencement of the game the postmaster assigns to each player the name of a town, and if the players are numerous he writes the names given to them on a slip of paper in case his memory should fail him. These preliminaries having been arranged, the blind postman is placed in the center of the room, and the postmaster general retires to some snug corner whence he can overlook the other players. When this important functionary calls out the names of two towns—thus, "New York to Philadelphia"—the players who bear these names must immediately change seats, and as they run from one side of the room to another the postman tries to capture them. If the postman can succeed in catching one of the players or if he can manage to sit down on an empty chair the player that is caught or excluded from his place becomes postman.

The postmaster general is not changed throughout the game unless he gets tired of his office. When a player remains seated after his name has been called he must pay a forfeit, or if the game is played without forfeits he must go to the bottom of the class, which is represented by a particular chair, and to make room for him all the players who were formerly below him shift their places.—Philadelphia Ledger.

THE COW TREE.

South American Plant Furnishes Milk, Bread and Fruit.

Groves of cow trees, such as are to be found in hilly districts of certain parts of South America, are said to be a wonderful sight. These trees, which, it need scarcely be said, do not actually resemble cows, grow to great height, yet for lengths of perhaps fifty feet they are quite without branches. Near the top they expand into thick heads of foliage, however, and display a matted texture of leaves and branches.

If you walk in a cow tree grove at daybreak or evening you might have the surprising pleasure of seeing the natives come to milk the cow trees. A hole is bored into the heart of the trunk. From this hole there pours a milky fluid much esteemed as a drink by some. If this fluid is put aside for some time a thick white cake forms at the top of it, while beneath there remains only a clear liquid.

The fruit of the tree is also esteemed as food. It is of moderate size and contains one or two nuts which are said to rival strawberries and cream in their flavor. And this is not all. A kind of bread is made from the bark of the tree and is said to be almost as nourishing as wheaten bread.—Chicago News.

How to Bore a Square Hole.

You would not consider it possible to bore a square hole in a piece of cardboard, yet such a thing can be done. Take a cardboard or a thin piece of wood, fold and place it between two pieces of board with the fold up; the boards are then put in a vise, as shown. Start the bit with the screw point in the fold, using a one inch bit, and bore a hole one-half inch deep. When the cardboard is taken from the vise it will appear as shown at B and when unfolded as at A.—Popular Mechanics.

How Rooms Are Rented In Mexico.

Strangers sometimes mildly wonder why newspapers or sheets of blank papers are tied on the windows of balconies of certain houses. A sheet of paper thus arranged is a sign meaning that there are rooms to rent in the house on which it is displayed and is just as significant in its import as three golden balls over a pawnbroker's shop are in other countries.

Dandelions.

I know not how it happened,
But when I looked out at dawn
A merry troop of golden heads
Were playing on the lawn
And, laughing with the summer breeze
Who chanced to linger there,
Were begging him for strings of dew
To bind upon their hair.

I know not how it happens,
But youth must surely pass
As certainly and silently
As wind across the grass,
And now where golden locks were seen
Beyond the garden beds
A gentle group of grandams sit
With placid silver heads.

The Useful Banana Plant.

Every need of the human appetite for food seems to be supplied by the banana. It is nutritious; it is fattening and very palatable. It can be eaten raw or it can be cooked in more than a dozen different ways.

The bananas we eat come largely from the West Indies and the Central and South American states bordering on the Caribbean sea.

The banana is really, like the Indian corn plant, only a highly developed grass. Like Indian corn, it grows from a pithy stalk, but the fruit hangs from the stalk in bunches of from 100 to 150 separate bananas. Occasionally the great bunches become so heavy they break the stalk down. The plants sometimes grow to be twenty or thirty feet high, with graceful, waving leaves ten feet long. The stalk has no branches, only a great cluster of leaves at the top, with the fruit hanging down below them.

The banana is seedless. It is propagated from sprouts called suckers. These grow out from the roots of the old plant, and when they are three feet high they are cut loose and planted in rows about eight feet apart. For the first six months the ground must be kept clear of weeds, and that is the only work required from planting to gathering the fruit.

When the bananas begin to form there first appears one great flower bud, as it is called. By and by it bursts open and shows 100 to 150 little flowers growing inside. They come into bloom. Then the tiny green banana itself forms behind the flower, which it shoves forward toward its outer end farther and farther. The flower fades and becomes smaller and finally disappears.

CHANGING FROM FLOWER TO FRUIT.

Like Indian corn again, a banana plant only produces fruit once, then dies. In the plantations young suckers are being continually set out in new fields. They come into bearing in a year and a half to two years.

Questions and Answers.

What is the difference between a blacksmith and a good riding horse? One is a horseshoer, the other a sure horse.

When issuing an invitation to a party what single word will tell the hour to begin dancing? At-ten-dance.

What were the greatest feats ever performed? Wheeling West Virginia and Lansing Michigan.

What does an envelope say when it is licked? It just shuts up and says nothing.

When was Burgoyne's army totally destroyed? When it was quartered at New York.

What motive had the inventor of railways in view? A loco-motive.

What kind of ribbon do mermaids use on their hair? Marine bands.—Philadelphia Ledger.

My Lady's Clothes.

A color barred game for girls is "my lady's clothes" or "dressing the lady." The players first decide on what colors shall be forbidden—perhaps blue, black and pink. The first player then asks the next, "How shall my lady be dressed for the ball?" and the answer must contain no mention of these colors. This question goes around the ring, no article being allowed to be mentioned twice. Any one using the forbidden colors must pay any penalty suggested by the leader of the game.

A Contrast.

Norwegians and Lapps, the tallest and the shortest peoples of the world, live side by side.

"A Little Bird Told Me."

The common saying, "A little bird told me," has its origin in the Bible. In Ecclesiastes x, 20, we read, "Curse not the king, no not in thy thought, for a bird of the air shall carry the voice and that which hath wings shall tell the matter.

Red Hickory.

Well seasoned red hickory weighs 52.37 pounds to the cubic foot.

The Dahlia.

One of the tales told of the dahlia is that the flower ornamented the royal gardens of the Escurial at Madrid for several years before Spanish jealousy would allow it to be introduced into the other countries of Europe.

Zulu Endurance.

The rate at which Zulus can travel in an emergency is astonishing. Some will cover as many as fifty miles in six hours. Eight miles an hour is an ordinary pace.

A Turtle That Eats Grass.

The Xerobates agassizii, the grass eating turtle of the Mojave desert, is said to be the only one of the turtle species which lives by grazing like a horse or an ox. Xerobates digs a hole in the sand to escape the intense heat, is about ten inches in length when full grown and weighs from six to eight pounds.

The Churchyard Beetle.

In Sweden the churchyard beetle is regarded as a messenger of pestilence and death, and its appearance always excites violent alarm. A species closely allied is eaten by Egyptian women with a view to acquiring plumpness.

Seek Their Color.

Divers in the clear waters of the tropical seas find that fish of different colors when frightened do not all dart in the same direction, but that each different kind takes shelter in that portion of the submarine growth nearest in color to that of the fish.

The Earliest Fan.

Perhaps the earliest fan in history was mentioned in hieroglyphics deciphered by the Egyptologist, Lepsius. In his researches he found this sentence referring to Osiris, "In his hand he held a fan."

A Curious Fly.

A curious lantern fly discovered by naturalists in the Malay archipelago possesses the power of jumping a distance of several feet without opening its wings. It has a projection on its head which, when bent back and suddenly released, throws the insect into the air. This fly was seen to jump from the ground to the roof of a hut.

The Smallest Jail.

The smallest jail in the world is the old prison at Sark, in the Channel islands. The jail has but two cells.

Division of Time.

The Greeks and Romans had no weeks until they borrowed this division of time from the east. The Greeks divided the month into three equal periods, the Romans into three very unequal, the kalends, ides and nones.

Broadcloth.

Broadcloth was first so called because it took two weavers side by side to fling the shuttle across it.

Chinese Ink.

Chinese ink is made by carbonizing a mixture of colza or sesame oil, varnish and lard and mixing the product with gum water and a little camphor and musk. The ink is pressed into molds to dry.

Cannon.

The first cannon to be cast in one piece was made by an English ironmaster in 1543.

A Historic Reef.

The Reef of Norman's Woe, made known to every schoolboy through Longefellow's "Wreck of the Hesperus," is but a short distance offshore from Rafe's chasm, near Gloucester, on the north shore of Massachusetts.

Babylon.

Babylon was probably the first city in the world with a population of 1,000,000.

Red Meats.

"Red" meats are less liable to contamination than fish or chicken. The latter should not be eaten if there is the least suspicion of odor about them. Beef slightly tainted, though disagreeable, will not produce ptomaine poisoning.

The Largest Pearl.

The largest pearl known is two inches long and four round and is said to be worth $250,000.

Blood Heat.

Blood heat, the normal temperature of the human body, is about 98½ degrees F. This is known as blood heat and is maintained within one or two degrees, whether in the arctic or the tropical regions. Any deviation from the average is injurious and if it be great or long continued is likely to prove fatal.

Peat Alcohol.

Alcohol is obtained from peat by treating the fiber with sulphuric acid and fermenting with a special yeast. A ton of dry peat yields forty-three gallons of pure spirit at one-fourth of the cost of potato alcohol.

How a Submarine Dives.

All submarine vessels are brought to a condition of readiness to submerge by taking in water ballast in suitably arranged and controlled tanks. This causes more of the boat to sink below the water's surface and finally leaves her with only a small part of her conning tower out of water. The remaining part above water represents what is called "reserve buoyancy." This buoyancy varies generally from 200 to 1,000 pounds, depending upon the size of the craft, and it is to overcome the permanent tendency to rise represented by this reserve that pressure is brought to bear upon the submerging rudders or the hydroplanes in order to make the boat sink after she is once put in motion. It is the height out of water or reserve of buoyancy of the submersible which gives her her superior sea keeping qualities, which permits the vessel to be driven safely on the surface at higher rates of speed and which contributes in other ways to the efficiency, the habitability and the military value of the craft.—Harper's Weekly.

Phony Mistake.

"The mistakes that occur through and by the telephone are numerous," said the lady who had one in her house, "and some of them are as amusing as the others are annoying. The last one I had happen to me was rather curious. My sister-in-law is named Drake, and I called her up at her house. The maid told me she had left word to call her up at a certain number, which I thought I had right. I called it and asked for Drake. They said there was no such person there. Then I wanted to know what place it was. The man at the other end said it was a poultry store, and he didn't laugh when he said it. It struck me as so funny that I laughed right out, and the man asked me what I was laughing at. He hadn't seen the point, and I rang off without enlightening him."—New York Herald.

The Owl In History.

The owl was in former times generally regarded as an omen of misfortune or death, but as the Egyptians represented Minerva under the form of an owl the Athenians, who were under the care of this goddess, looked upon the appearance of the owl as a favorable omen. It therefore formed upon the ancient coins referred to the symbol of Athens and her foreign possessions. The Chinese and the Tartars have also held the owl in high esteem. The first named used to wear owl's feathers in their caps, and some Tartar tribes still worship idols made like owls.

Borrowing Trouble.

Cures Colds! Prevents Pneumonia

Pain Weakens

Headache, rheumatism, neuralgia, or pains of any nature weaken the system—they are a strain upon the nerves. Almost instant relief can be obtained by taking Dr. Miles Anti-Pain Pills, and without any bad after-effects. Take one on first indication of an attack—it will ward it off. They are a pleasant little tablet, sold by druggists everywhere, 25 doses 25 cents; never sold in bulk.

"I was subject to constant headaches for a period of four years. At times I was almost unfitted for the work in which I am engaged, that of station agent. Through the advice of a friend I tried Dr. Miles' Anti-Pain Pills, and the result has been that I have entirely eradicated my system of those continuous headaches that follow a continual mental strain. They have done for me all that is claimed for them."
O. L. RUSSELL,
Agt. C. & N. W. Ry., Battle Creek, Ia.

"I have used Dr. Miles' Anti-Pain Pills for a year now for neuralgia and find there is nothing like them. They surely have been a blessing to me." MRS. M. J. HAMILTON,

Lime A Fertilizer.

The National Stockman and Farmer.

Quite a number of the agricultural writers are having a hard time convincing the farmer that lime is not a fertilizer.

Very recently I have read two or three articles in agricultural journals in which the writers have very emphatically declared that lime is not in any sense a fertilizer, and that farmers should at once disabuse their minds of that idea.

I am unable to understand how these writers arrive at this conclusion, unless it be on the theory that nothing is a fertilizer that does not contain nitrogen, potash or phosphorus. By this method of reasoning, they might arrive at the conclusion that lime is not a fertilizer.

But if they use the term "fertilizer" in the broader and more comprehensive sense of being anything that adds fertility to the soil, and aids the crops to attain their best and most perfect state of development, then lime is undoubtedly and very essentially a fertilizer, for in the growth and development of some of the most important farm crops lime plays as important a part as any of the above named and so-called prime fertilizing elements.

Nearly all of the cultivated crops require and take up in their growth some lime, and if the lime content of the soil be below what is required in the growth of the particular plant it will suffer in consequence, and will not attain its full and complete development by reason of the lack of lime in the soil, and so for that particular plant lime is as essentially a fertilizer to the extent of the lime reqirements of the plant as is nitrogen, potash or phosphorus.

The clover plant in making its growth uses practically the same amounts of lime nitrogen, and potash, each of which elements is several times the amount of phosphorus used by the plant and yet no one will say that phosphorus is not a fertilizer for the clover plant. In view of this fact lime is a fertilizer for the clover plant equal in importance with nitrogen and potash, and vastly more important than phosphorus.

The writers above referred to seem to be trying to impress their readers with the idea that lime is only a corrective agency, in the way of reducing and neutralizing the acidity of the soil, and putting it in better physical condition and thus making the environments of the plant more conducive to its growth.

This theory is perhaps correct as far as it goes but it does not go far enough, and it is therefore erroneous and misleading. Why do not these writers say to the farmer that lime, in addition to being a corrective agency for the soil, is an essential element of fertility; that soil deficient in lime is an unproductive soil, that if the requisite lime content of the soil is lacking plants will not attain their full growth and development until lime is supplied in the amount lacking, and that a rich and fertile soil is an impossibility without available lime to the extent of the plant requirements.

As a further proof of my contention, Director Thorne of the Ohio Agricultural Experiment Station says: "When the land begins to need lime, it is a waste of time, energy and money to continue to cultivate it until this need is supplied, for the economical use of every other fertilizing material including manure, depends upon the lime supply. If this is deficient, everything else must fall short of its possible attainment." So that the full benefit of the other so-called all-important elements of fertility cannot be derived, unless the lime content of the soil is up to proper requirement.

If this statement of Director Thorne be correct, and there seems to be no doubt of its being so, then lime is is more essentially a fertilizer than either nitrogen, potash or phoshorus, in that these elements of fertility will not have their full effect on the crop unless the requisite amount of lime is supplied.

Lime add to the soil an element necessary to the growth of the plant, and it has the further effect of making available the nitrogen, potash and phosphorus, and in this way it performs a double service as a fertilizer.

Life

The poet's exclamation: "O Life! I feel thee bounding in my veins," is a joyous one. Persons that can rarely or never make it, in honesty to themselves, are among the most unfortunate. They do not live, but exist, for to live implies more than to be. To live is to be well and strong—to arise feeling equal to the ordinary duties of the day, and to retire not overcome by them—to feel life bounding in the veins. A medicine that has made thousands of people, men and women, well and strong, has accomplished a great work, bestowing their chief blessings, and that medicine is Hood's Sarsaparilla. The weak, run-down, or debilitated, from any cause, should not fail to take it. It builds up the whole system, changes existence into life, and makes life more abounding. We are glad to say these words in its favor to the readers of our columns.

A failing tiny nerve—no larger than the finest silken thread—takes from the Heart its impulse its power, its regularity. The Stomach also has its hidden or inside nerve. It was Dr Shoop who first told us it was wrong to drug a weak or failing Stomach, Heart or Kidneys. His prescription—Dr. Shoop's Restorative—is directed straight for the cause of these ailments—these weak and faltering inside nerves. This no doubt clearly explains why the Restorative has of late grown so rapidly in popularity. Druggists say that those who test the Restorative even for a few days soon become fully convinced of its wonderful merit. Anyway don't drug the organ. Treating he cause of sickness is the only sensible and successful way. Sold by C. M. Parrish.

A Cocoa Egg-Nog.

A cocoa egg-nog is quickly made. Beat the white of one egg until stiff, and add gradually, while beating constantly, one teaspoonful of sugar, one teaspoonful of breakfast cocoa and a few grains of salt. Add to one half the mixture, while beating constantly, three fourths of a cupful of cold milk. Turn into a glass and pile the remaining mixture on top.—Woman's Home Companion for August.

Foley's Honey and Tar not only stops chronic coughs that weaken the constitution and develop into consumption, but heals and strengthens the lungs. It affords comfort and relief in the worst case of chronic bronchitis, asthma, hay fever and lung trouble. Sold by C. M. Parrish.

If you have pains in the back, weak back or any other indication of a weakened or disordered condition of the Kidneys or bladder, you should get DeWitt's Kidney and Bladder Pills right away when you experience the least sign of Kidney or bladder complaints, but be sure that you get DeWitt's Kidney and Bladder Pills. We know what they will do for you, and if you will send your name and address to E. O. DeWitt & Co., Chicago, you will receive a free trial box of these kidney and bladder pills. They are sold here by all Druggists.

Delay in commencing treatment for a slight irregularity that could have been cured quickly by Foley's Kidney Remedy may result in a serious kidney disease. Foley's Kidney Remedy builds up the worn out tissues and strengthens these organs. Sold by C. M. Parrish.

The best pills made are DeWitt's Little Early Risers, the famous little liver pills. They are small, gentle pleasant, easy to take and act promptly. They are sold by all Druggists.

If people with symptoms of kidney or bladder trouble could realize their danger they would without loss of time commence taking Foley's Kidney Remedy. This great remedy stops the pain and the irregularities, strengthens and builds up these organs and there is no danger of Brights' disease or other serious disorder. Do not disregard the early symptoms. Sold by C. M. Parrish.

Do You Get Up With a Lame Back?

Kidney Trouble Makes You Miserable.

Almost everyone knows of Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, the great kidney, liver and bladder remedy, because of its remarkable health restoring properties. Swamp-Root fulfills almost every wish in overcoming rheumatism, pain in the back, kidneys, liver, bladder and every part of the urinary passage. It corrects inability to hold water and scalding pain in passing it, or bad effects following use of liquor, wine or beer, and overcomes that unpleasant necessity of being compelled to go often through the day, and to get up many times during the night.

Swamp-Root is not recommended for everything but if you have kidney, liver or bladder trouble, it will be found just the remedy you need. It has been thoroughly tested in private practice, and has proved so successful that a special arrangement has been made by which all readers of this paper, who have not already tried it, may have a sample bottle sent free by mail, also a book telling more about Swamp-Root, and how to find out if you have kidney or bladder trouble. When writing mention reading this generous offer in this paper and send your address to Dr. Kilmer & Co., Home of Swamp-Root, Binghamton, N. Y. The regular fifty-cent and one-dollar size bottles are sold by all druggists. Don't make any mistake but remember the name, Swamp-Root, Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, and the address, Binghamton, N. Y., on every bottle.

REPUBLICAN TICKET.

State.

Supreme Court Justice.
JUDGE ROBERT VON MOSCHZISKER, of Phila.

Auditor General.
A. E. SISSON, of Erie.

State Treasurer.
J. A. STOBER, of Lancaster.

County.

Jury Commissioner,
JOHN D. DECKER, of Potter Twp.

Senator Sisson.

In nominating Senator A. E. Sisson, for Auditor General, the Republican State convention acted wisely and well, It named a man who will prove a tower of strength to the ticket and one who will, in every way, meet the requirements of that responsible post at Harrisburg,

Senator Sisson is a lawyer, and a good lawyer, too, He has a host of friends, the State over, but it is among his home people, in Erie county, that he is known best. Few men, especially those who have been in public life for even a short time, possess enough popularity to command the nomination of more than their respective parties. This is quite natural and is due chiefly to partisan feelings. Where a man is coming up for re-election and is so popular as to be named on the tickets of all parties, there is something more to him than is the case with the average candidate. Such a man necessarily means something among his home people.

This is what happened last year when when Senator Sisson was a candidate to succeed himself in the State Senate. The Democrats in his district nominated him on their ticket. The Republicans enthusiastically accorded him a renomination. The nominations were made at the primaries, where every Democrat and every Republican had full opportunity to register his preference of candidates. The result was a remarkable tribute to Senator Sisson. If the Democrats of Erie, who live with him and who know him as a neighbor and friend, were willing to vote for him [illegible] every other county should not hesitate to support him for Auditor General.

Everybody who knows Senator Sisson likes him. He is a home man. While law is his profession he is engaged in numerous business enterprises, and their success has been due largely to his close attention to details. Conservative and ruggedly honest, Senator Sisson's name has never figured in any scandal; it has never been linked wi h the suspicion of scandal. The man has yet to come forward who will say that with Senator Sisson as Auditor General the State would be in danger of loss, either from dishonesty or from carelessness. No Republican need be in doubt about voting for him. Under Senator Sisson's administration of the office the high standard of efficiency established by Auditor General Young is certain to be maintained.

Senator Sisson was born in Dayton, N. Y., January 12, 1851. He received his education in the common schools and also the Kingsville Academy, Ohio, and the North East (Pa.,) Seminary. He was admitted to the bar, in Erie county, in 1881. He was chosen chairman of the Republican committee, in Erie county, in 1885, and again in 1886. In 1890 he was elected District Attorney. In 1900 he was elected to the State Senate, serving with so much satisfaction to the people of his district that he was re-elected in 1904, and again in 1908. At the close of the 1907 session he had the honor of being elected president pro tem.

To Our Citizens.

"The Repulican" is authorized to announce that the Pennsylvania Railroad Company has been asked to select a site for a silk mill in the central part of the State. It is up to the citizens of Bellefonte to take advantage of an opportunity that may mean thousands of dollars of new business for our town and employment for many persons.

The site for the proposed silk mill has not been chosen. Delay, however, may cost Bellefonte this new industry. We strongly urge the Board of Trade to get into communication with the Pennsylvania Railroad Company officials and see to it that Bellefonte gets this silk mill. The board is the proper body to act, and action is what is required at this time.

Good Roads Meeting.

State Highway Commissioner Hunter, General Beaver and Judge Orvis will address a "good roads" meeting, in the Court House, Thursday, August 5, at 10 o'clock, A. M. A special entertainment will be given the road supervisors of the various townships who are present.

CO. B "MAKES GOOD" AT CAMP ALFRED HUNT

Centre County Boys Show Up Splendidly at Somerset.

5th. REGIMENT IS PRAISED

Colonel Taylor's Men Win Fresh Laurels For Fine Appearance and Soldierly Conduct—Interesting Sidelights on Daily Life in Camp.

Camp Alfred E. Hunt,
Somerset, Pa., July 27, 1909.

Flushed with expectancy and thrilled with the anticipation of the pleasurable and profitable experience to be enjoyed during a week of military encampment, the boys of the "Gallant Fifth," headed by their popular and soldierly Colonel, Hugh S. Taylor, marched proudly through the pretty little town of Somerset, in the early morning of July 23, and took possession of the comfortable quarters already prepared at "Camp Hunt" by the hard and faithful efforts of the advanced detail, Sergeant Thomas Beaver superintending, as usual.

It was late in the night of July 22 that the regiment reached Somerset station, while the rain was falling in a veritable cloudburst, and so Colonel Taylor, with his wonted headiness, decided to keep his troops on the train during the night and enter camp at daybreak. Upon arriving at quarters the "sojer" boys proceeded at once to gather up all the baggage and distribute it in the proper places, erect the various mess tents and assist the advanced details generally in preparing the camp for the favorable opening which took place at 9 o'clock, Saturday morning.

In the presence of a large crowd of spectators, assembled on the hillsides, and with 3500 officers and men standing at attention, a consolidated band of one hundred and fifty pieces rendered those beautiful and inspiring strains of "The Star Spangled Banner," while "Old Glory" was unfurled to the breeze and the national salute of 21 guns was fired by the booming cannon.

The entire brigade of national guardsmen and regulars, at the command of Brigadier General Willis J. Hulings, presented arms, he himself saluting the colors with his sabre. The brigade was brought to "shoulder arms" and camp Alfred E. Hunt was formally opened. The initial ceremony was a grand and impressive one. The approach of the mounted officers and the aide officers, as they in true military style ascended the hill to Gen. Hulings' headquarters, was striking in its effect. He addressed the officers in terms of compliment for the excellent showing of the troops, the condition of the camp and the prospect of very interesting and successful military manoeuvers during the week in the way of company, battalion and brigade movements, tactical formations, and battle operations under the direction of officers from the United States Army. It might be interesting to note in passing that Somerset is a pretty little county seat of Somerset county, located in one of the most picturesque sections of the state, and that just at the edge of the town in the most accessible and conspicuous part of Camp Hunt the boys of the Fifth are stationed; and then in a southerly direction come the Tenth, the Fourteenth, the Sixteenth and Eighteenth regiments, respectively, with the cavalry, artillery and signal corps quartered in close proximity. The situation of the Fifth is one that commands a most beautiful view of the surrounding valleys, woods and mountains. Every thing about the camp is pleasing except the scarcity of water. Breezes are continually blowing and the heavy rains of the first two days have made the camp ground an ideal one for drilling and parade purposes, dust up to the present writing being an unknown quantity.

The review of all the guardsmen and regulars in the camp, which occurred on Sunday, was grand and imposing and enjoyed by thousands of spectators who came on the special excursions from Pittsburg and other points. Monday the troops were drilled, very thoroughly and all accoutrements cleaned and polished by way of preparation for the inspection on Tuesday. The Governor's grand review took place in the afternoon, at which a record breaking crowd attended. Wednesday, Thursday and Friday will be devoted to the more practical part of soldier life—the operations of offensive and defensive warfare, introducing the sham battle, the advance guard movements and outpost manoeuvers.

The soldiers anticipate this part of the camp routine with pleasure as they have found it in the past years to be as fascinating as it is practical. By Saturday the troops will have passed through a rigid discipline that will make them willing and ready to return once again to home scenes and occupations.

Company B had the largest attendance in the regiment at the opening of camp—a proud record.

The Fifth regiment was the first to arrive and as it moved with firm and steady step through the main avenue of Somerset, Gen. Hulings and Major Martin were silent observers from a hotel window. They later remarked that it made the best showing of all the regiments, in fact. Col. Taylor has received many compliments upon his boys' soldierly bearing. Among his callers was Lewis, the post office robber, who a few years ago, was shot by the Colonel at that time sheriff, in the Foust barn, in the Seven mountains while he was attempting to arrest him. He has just been released from his seven years' imprisonment in the Government penitentiary, at Atlanta, Georgia. He told the Colonel that he had liked him ever since he heard him say to the proprietor of the Potters Mills hotel that he must take care of the prisoner until he could be removed to the hospital.

On Saturday night after the band concert, Colonel Taylor was the guest of honor at a banquet tendered by Company C, of Hollidaysburg. On this occasion he presented a beautiful gold medal to Capt. J. A. Woleslager for bringing his company to the highest rating at the spring inspection. The Colonel's speech of presentation was eloquent, emphasizing the importance of every soldier at all times striving to attain the highest honors for himself and his regiment.

Capt. Hunter was honored? by a call from a soldier at 2 o'clock on Sunday morning. He desired a pass to Nashville, Tennessee. The Captain, in true classic style, informed him that he would be ordered to a station farther south and much hotter than Nashville unless he ceased his annoyance at once.

Capt. Locke is very successful in his service and wins the admiration of all by his splendid appearance in uniform.

Sergeants Smith, Beaver and Curtin are as dutiful as ever and labor constantly for the success and comfort of the regiment, while Lieutenant Robison and his aiding sergeants, Huff and Blair, are sparing no pains to keep the boys well and happy and attend to the injuries and ailments of the unfortunate. Lieutenant Robison is in charge of Major Hayes' duties while the latter is absent. Sergeant J. R. Hughes is in charge of the colors this year, as senior sergeant, and is endeavoring to make the Fifth Regiment color guard the best in the brigade. James Watson, of Indiana, is the soldierly junior color sergeant. Among the members of Col. Taylor's staff are Capt. Watson, of Indiana, one of the most popular young officers in the national guard, and Capt. Samuel F. Statler a grand old man and soldier. He enlisted in the army in 1861, at 13 years of age, and was mustered out Aug. 36, 1865. He was wounded twice. On March 21, 1866, he enlisted in Co. K, 3rd U. S. Infantry. In 1869 he organized Co. C, Fifth Regt. N. G. P. and was made First Serg't. In 1875 he organized Co. I, Fifth Reg't, was elected its captain and retired from the service later. Again he was elected captain and served three and one-half years, when he was elected major of the Fifth. In June, 1908, he organized Co. H, of Bradford, of which he is their efficient and beloved captain.

Edward Frank, of Co. B, was orderly the first day to Gen Hulings.

Rev. Victor Royer, formerly of Bellefonte, delivered a stirring address on Sunday, to a large crowd, on the leper's cry "Unclean."

Roger T. Bayard, our company clerk, is thriving on our camp fare. You might have thought Bert was fat when you saw him last; but, oh my, you ought to see him now.

Our old stand-by, Capt. P. F. Garbrick, is as usual, looking after the welfare of his boys and making some of the others captains in the Fifth sit up and take notice.

Sergeant "Dommy" McCafferty, is putting the "Rookies" through a course of sprouts, and you can wager your roll that when he gets through with them they will be the real goods. We predict that some day "Dommy" will be colonel of the Regiment.

First Serg't Wm. H. Brown, our County Recorder, is filling his new position with credit. Space does not permit us to set forth his many good qualities.

Serg't Major "Lem" Poorman, former First Serg't of our company, seems to be homesick for old Co. B, as he can be found most any time in our Co. street.

Sergeant Gladstone Taylor is kept busy most of the time figuring how he can get excused from the next drill. "Piggy," of course, can always be found if you look far enough for him. He has quite a few friends in the regiment and spends a good bit of his time visiting them.

Corporal Clyde Long, of Howard, was on guard duty, on Monday. He gave the corporals in the other companies a few pointers on guard duty.

Comissary Sergeant Linn Blackford, whose duty it is to receive and issue the rations to the Company, is complimented on the way he has performed his part of the work. "Tittle" is a good fellow and has a drag with the officers at the comissary. The position filled by the sergeant is one of great responsibility, and the boys give him credit with performing his duty in fine shape.

"Pat" Rine, "Spanish American War Veteran," is shaking hands with all of his old comrades in the 5th Regt.

Sergeant Harry Taylor thinks the camp is o. k., but that humming bird's eggs and angel food cake are hard on his stomach.

Guy Dale, one of the newly elected "non-coms" of the Co. is filling his position like an old vet.

First Lieut. Richard Taylor has had a bad cold for a few days but is now able to sit up and take notice of the big doings.

Our newly elected Second Lieut. Wm. H. Allen, proves to be a winner.

Wetzel, Bryan and Musser are always at their post of duty in the hospital department.

Manny Green, Harry Whiteman and William Smith are generals in the culinary department and are preparing the dainties in truly appetizing style.

"Bucky" Reese, physician? in the hospital corps, holds the record for the long distance run, having been chased by the provost guard from Somerset to camp—but "Bucky" was ahead.

John Trafford and Al. Baum are among the fixtures at camp that seem indispensable.

Company B had all the visitors in camp Sunday morning gathered around the company streets. The boys had the "Fly" out Monday morning, tossing the "rookies." Talk about the Wright Bros. and their aeroplane, it is not in it for a minute.

Hunting for camp lawn mowers, tent stretchers, keys to the parade grounds and running the strap gauntlet, have furnished the "rookies" plenty of work, and the old soldiers plenty of amusement.

Ross Parker and children, the Smith brothers, Mr. Casebeer and wife, and Mr. Charles Hughes have been interested visitors.

The 5th Reg't. ranks first in the 2nd Brigade and Co. B, ranks fourth in the regiment.

Sergeant Hugg has as fine a drum and bugle corps as can be found in the brigade.

Nighthart's barber tent proves to be one of the most popular resorts in camp.

Gentlemen---Socially as well as officially, I meet a large number of women, old and young; bright, intelligent women who do their own thinking and form their own opinions. You will therefore be pleased to know that Peruna is a favorite remedy among women, and that it is generally considered superior to any prescription known in cases of catarrh and weakness peculiar to the sex. Mauck, of Millheim, were in attendance at the reception at William Harter's, near Coburn, in honor of Randall Harter, who had just returned with his wife from West Virginia. The house was filled with people, and a good time was had. W. E. Keen was toastmaster. Keen got off some good ones.

Alexander McCoy, of Potters Mills, was in town a few days ago.

H. F. Barber, of Mifflinburg, shook hands with his acquaintances here this week.

Thomas J. Miller, of Philadelphia, has been in this section buying up a car load of horses. George E. Homan, of Millheim, the well known horse buyer, accompanied him and assisted in purchasing one of the best lots of horses ever shipped from this locality. They were shipped last Friday to Philadelphia.

John Runkle, of Middleburg, was the guest of F. O. Hosterman, on Penn Street, last week.

Isaac A. Shauver returned from his western trip last Friday.

Dr. John G. Spangler, of Mapleton, owner of the Millheim water plant, was in town a day or two ago on business. He came in an automobile and accompanying him were W. B. Kinsloe, Robert Reed and R. H. Hooper, all of Huntingdon county.

T. B. Motz who was in Mexico recently, gives a good description of the Mexican people, their habits and customs, climate, water etc. Mr. Motz was looking after gold mines in which he is interested.

Prof. C. L. Gramly, of Rebersburg, had business in town last Saturday.

Frank Fisher, James Keller and a party of ladies from Penn Hall, were in town on Saturday. Mr. Fisher has one of the best automobiles we have seen here for many a day.

Farmers have begun threshing their grain and some report a good yield.

The boardwalks at the residence of D. W. Zeigler, along the hardware store and from the post office to the diamond, are in a miserable condition; a menace to life, and limb. Why the street and alley committee do not see to these walks is very strange. Accidents may occur and then who is to blame?

John Zeigler, of Laurelton, is in town visiting relatives. Mr. Zeigler was born and raised here. He has not been here for twelve years.

Quite a number of people from this locality attended the festival at Madisonburg last Saturday evening.

Sandy Ridge.

Do you know where it is? Are you one of our great family that have at sometime lived here and know our people? Do you know a few of our people, and experience a similar pleasure in seeing their names in the paper as if you had shaken hands with an old friend?

Are you a stranger to whom the term "Sandy Ridge" is only a name?

However that may be, let me tell you that Sandy Ridge is a thriving little town of considerable altitude, along the Clearfield branch of the P. R. R. Its people are agreeable, hospitable working people. They come and go and receive and entertain visitors; they have their romances, their griefs and joys; their weddings and, sad to say, sometimes a death. It is the purpose of the correspondent to send each week an account of the happenings so far as possible and report impartially each item of interest that may come under the observation of the writer.

We, therefore, make our little bow and take our place among our sister towns in the columns of the new "Republican."

Base Ball is now the prevailing interest of our people. Everybody talks about it and everybody goes each Saturday afternoon to see the games. The boys have fitted up their grounds in modern style and erected a grandstand and charge admission. Last Saturday there was a very exciting game played between Sandy Ridge and Osceola. It was a very close game but the home team came out a little ahead. There were two accidents. Two men, both from Osceola, were so badly hurt that a doctor had to be called. One had his nose smashed and front teeth loosened, and the other was knocked down and became unconscious and also received internal injuries.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Hess and children are enjoying the sea breezes of Atlantic City. During their absence the Ridge House is under the management of Nathan Frontz and wife.

Mr. and Mrs. Howard Woomer are visiting at the home of William Garland.

Eighteen members of the P. O. S. of A., of Howard, went to Mt. Pleasant, near Hannah, on Saturday, and instituted a new camp of the order. There were thirty-three charter members to receive the degree, and the camp starts with good promises of a bright future.

Harry Williams and family have returned to their home in Altoona, after a visit of six weeks in Howard.

Mrs. Lester Bowes and little daughter are visiting in Buffalo, where Mr. Bowes is employed.

Walter Holter was a Bellefonte visitor on Sunday,

The S. S. S. club, of this place, has served some tasty and elaborate lunches but the members never passed judgment upon the choice viands thus served until a recent meeting when the medal was awarded Mrs. Bechdel for her superior angel cake.

Mt. Pleasant.

Mrs. Pious Richards spent Thursday with friends in Tyrone.

Mrs. Benjamin Weaver and two little sons visited her daughter, Mrs. David Fink, recently.

Miss Nannie Weaver returned home after spending a few days with her sister, Mrs. Jacob Walk, of Osceola, who has been ill but who is somewhat improved.

Last week Richard Bros. raised Robert Orwick's new barn, the work being done by a few men, with the use of a gin-pole and tackle. It will not be long till the barn will be ready for the fine crop that is waiting for it.

The Mt. Pleasant U. B. Sabbath School will hold their annual picnic, Saturday, August 28, in the grove near the church. Everyone is cordially invited to attend and have a good time greeting friends.

Mrs. Mary Fink spent Sunday with relatives in Tyrone.

Mrs. Rebecca Fink, who attended the funeral of her brother, John Newman, in Philipsburg, returned home Tuesday evening.

Miss Virginia Newman was taken quite ill Sunday night, while at prayer meeting. It is hope she may recover soon.

Mr. and Mrs. John Henderson spent Monday in Tyone.

Quiet a number of the P. O. S. of A. lodge of Howard organized a similar lodge here Saturday night.

Pine Glenn

Don't forget the festival on Friday night at the M. E. Church. Proceeds for the Church.

Harry Craft and little niece, Nellie Morris, of Philipsburg, are visiting at the home of Jacob Craft.

George Loy, of Clearfield, was at home over Sunday.

Miss Ruth Smith, of Lock Haven, is another pleasant visitor at the home of Edward Beates.

A. V. Daugherty purchased a handsome and up-to-date carriage last week. It is one of the finest of that kind in our "Glenn".

Jerusha Daugherty returned on Monday from a pleasant visit with her sister, Mrs. Charles Smith, of Chambersburg.

Lloyd Daugherty departed on Tuesday for Woodrich, W. Va., where he will be employed the rest of the summer.

Grayce Vallimont and Iva Askey were Moshannon callers on Friday.

Iva and Ruth Askey will entertain the Epworth League on Thursday night. All members are requested to be present.

The services were well attended in the Advent Church on Saturday night. The minister, Rev. Meredith, delivered a fine and interesting sermon. Comunion was also held.

Messrs Conaway and Bowes, of Winburne attended Epworth League on Sunday. Come again, boys.

Mt. Eagle.

Ammon Gramley, tenant farmer on the F. S. Bowser farm, below town, is busy threshing wheat this week. He will ship it to Bellefonte. The farmers about here are pretty nearly done hauling in their wheat.

Miss Florence Leathers, on Tuesday, received a young lady visitor.

Grandmother Garthoof is visiting in Mt. Eagle.

Mrs. Florence Dunkle's sister is paying her a visit this week.

Mrs. H. E. E. Heverly and the children are visiting friends at Runville. Mr. H. is very lonely just now.

Katherine Bathurst and Miss Stull, of Lock Haven, are busy these days picking wartleberries. They are stopping with Lide Strickland.

The Misses Garthoof, of Lock Haven, are visiting their aunt, Miss Ella Leathers.

Well, it looks like a short corn crop in Bald Eagle valley, unless we have rain pretty soon. Here it is, past the 27th. of July, and the corn is not in blossom, yet.

If the weather continues nice this week, the farmers will be pretty well through with their harvest, except the oats which will be a very short crop.

Claire Leathers, with two young ladies, from Howard, spent a day with Mrs. Etty Leathers.

Miss Cora Leathers and several friends drove to Bellefonte, one day last week.

school there. Years ago, to keep the rear wall from falling out, two large iron rods were run through the building from front to rear. Not only the workmen but quite a number of citizens who saw the walls taken down bear testimony to the unsafe condition of the building and expressed gratification over the action of the board in having done so "for in all probability it has prevented a great calamity."

The new building will be free from danger by fire and the appliances to keep the rooms supplied with fresh air, warmed to a standard of seventy degrees, will be a thousand times better than heretofore. Instead of no hall there will be two large airy halls. There will also be rooms in which the boys and girls in bad weather can find recreation, and rooms in which instruction can be given in manual training as well as in domestic science. True this causes the building to cost some more. It comes as a matter of necessity for the benefit of the pupils, and the progress of the schools and those who have children to be educated should rejoice in it.

Of course but for the laws under which we live, and the children which we have, there would be no schools. The young people in the schools are entitled to the best building, rooms, and appliances that can be given, as all young people may, indeed can, if they or their parents will, enjoy these privileges. I cannot understand why any one within the limits of the borough should be displeased at the action of the board.

I know it is the privilege of the citizens in this country to criticise and the man or set of men who holds an office of any kind, salaried or not, and expects to get through without being criticised is mistaken. Criticism if done in a spirit of justice and for the purpose of helping to a right conclusion is of some benefit. Very often it is based on misinformation. That is, the person who criticises does not from his position have the knowledge of the matter he criticises, that those who have the responsibility and must act have.

The question is with the voters of the borough. The laws of the commonwealth makes it the duty of the board of directors to provide proper buildings and all needed room and accommodations for all persons between the ages of six and twenty-one. To have done this for only the present and not made some provisions for the future would have been a clear waste of money.

The people will surely not hinder or prevent the school board from doing what the law requires it to do.

Respectfully,
D. F. FORTNEY.

REAL ESTATE AUCTION

Novel Event Planned for Highlands, State College, Aug. 14.

Fifty choice building lots to be auctioned off to the highest bidder is the novel event planned for Highlands, the new addition of State College, on Wednesday, August 14. A free special train will be run from Bellefonte to State College at 10.30 o'clock, on the morning of the 14th, returning that night, and stopping at all regular stations both ways. Leathers Brothers, the enterprising real estate operators, are managing the auction and a busy day is in store for all who attend.

An interesting feature has been arranged, whereby the managers promise to give away a $500 lot. Just how it is proposed to conduct the contest has not been announced. Other interesting features will be a balloon ascension, band concerts, etc. The managers of the auction have extended a special invitation to ladies to attend. Col. J. C. Morrow, one of the greatest real estate auctioneers in the business, will have charge of selling the lots, and it will be worth while to hear him talk. All in all, the program arranged by Leathers Bros. calls for a big day. The sale will take place rain or shine.

Ordinance.

AN ORDINANCE, regulating theatrical or other exhibitions, where the same are not confined to permanent buildings.

SECTION 1. Be it enacted by the Town Council of the Borough of Bellefonte and it is hereby enacted by the authority of the same. That all theatrical exhibitions, concerts, circuses, shows, mountebanks and jugglers, and all other exhibitions and parades, where the same are not confined to a building constructed for such purposes, in this Borough, shall be subject to a license tax of not less than two dollars nor more than forty dollars for each day on which such exhibition or parade may be given.

SECTION 2. Before any such exhibition or parade shall take place on the streets of this Borough, or in any portion thereof, except in a building constructed for such purposes, the management of such exhibition or parade shall take out a license to be issued by the Chief Burgess at such rates as he shall determine, whether it be the maximum or minimum as above set forth, which said license shall designate the place where such exhibitions shall be held or the route of such parade.

SECTION 3. If any person or corporation shall attempt to give any such exhibition or parade without first obtaining such license and paying for same, or if such exhibition or parade shall be held in a place not designated in said license, such person or the manager or persons in charge of such corporation shall be liable to a penalty of not less than five dollars nor more than fifty dollars, to be collected by suit in the name of the Borough before the Chief Burgess or any Justice of the Peace in the usual manner.

SECTION 4. All ordinances, or parts of ordinances, inconsistent herewith are here by repealed:

Election Notice.

Notice is hereby given that pursuant to a vote of the board of school directors of the School District of the Borough of Bellefonte a special election will be held in said borough on the Tuesday the 17th day of August A. D. 1909, for the purpose of obtaining the assent of the electors of the said school district to increase the indebtedness of said school district to the amount of thirty-three thousand ($33,000.00) dollars to be used in the erection and construction of a new Public School Building for the use of the public schools of said borough.

The said election will be held at the places and by the officers provided by law for the holding of elections in the aforesaid borough.

Notice is also hereby given that the amount of the last assessed valuation of taxable property in the said borough of Bellefonte as adjusted for 1909, is $1,653,804.00.

The present indebtedness of the said school district is as follows to wit:—

Old debt, contracted before 1873		$25,000.00
Sinking fund, applicable to same	$3,614.60
Tax due sinking fund from levies prior to 1909	1,485.40	5,000.00
Net old debt,		$20,000.00
Increase authorized by vote of the board, March 9, 1909,		32,000.00
Total debt,		$52,000.00

The proposed increase of debt is thirty-three thousand ($33,000.00) dollars, and the purpose of such increase is to obtain funds to complete the erection of construction of the new Public School Building now being built for the use of the schools of said borough, to finish the same and grading the lot.

The proposed increase is not quite two per cent of the assessed valuation of the taxable property in the said borough as adjusted by the last assessment.

Polls open at seven (7) o'clock A. M., and close at seven (7) P. M. By order of the Board.

"FREE METHODISTS"

Revival Here Arouses Interest as To Origin of Term.

Revival services of the "Free Methodists," being held in a tent on the school house commons, Linn and Spring Sts. have aroused no little curiosity as to the origin of the name. Numerous inquiries have been made at "The Republican" office as to how the sect adopted its name, why and in what manner it differs from the Methodist Episcopal Church. For the information of our readers we publish the following from the International Cyclopaedia, which is self explanatory:

"The Free Methodist Church was organized in 1860 at Pekin, N. Y., by a convention of ministers and laymen who were, or had been members of the Methodist Episcopal church. The various reasons which led to the movement may be summed up in the conviction avowed that the Methodist church had declined from its orginal simplicity and spirituality. In proof of this it was alleged that many converts had been received without sufficient evidence of repentance and conversion; that wordly practices were tolerated, and engaging in unlawful business was allowed; that the direct witness of the spirit was wanting in many professed Methodists; that power over all sin was not possessed, and that while entire sanctification was not often even professedly attained, the preaching concerning it was widely divergent and contradictory; that discipline was generally neglected, and by some abandoned; that simplicity in dress had given place to fashionable attire; that free seats had been exchanged for pews; that choirs and organs had broken up congregational praise; that sermons were often read instead of being preached; that very costly church edifices were built and church fairs held; and that oath-bound fellowship in secret societies with irreligious men was tolerated and even encouraged. In the new organization, bishops were exchanged for general superintendents, to be elected every four years. Quadrennial, annual, quarterly and district conferences are held, and lay delegates equal in number to the ministers are admitted. The official board is retained Attendance at class meetings is made a condition of church membership. The preachers in charge nominate, and the classes elect their leaders. The office of presiding elder is retained under the name of district chairman. The articles of faith are the same as those of the Methodist Episcopal church with two additions: one designed to give emphasis to the doctrine of entire sanctification, and the other to that of endless future reward and punishment. No persons are admitted to church membership, even on probation without professing to exercise saving faith in Christ.

"All members are also required to lay aside all superfluous ornaments of dress to abstain from the use of intoxicating beverages and of tobacco, and not to join any society requiring an oath, affirmation, or promise of secrecy as a condition of membership. The denomination has made some progress and cherishes the hope of reviving the spirit of primitive Methodism Their religious services have much of the early warmth and zeal and congregational singing is universally practiced among them. They have two literary institutions, one at North Chili, N Y and the other at Spring Arbor, Mich: they are conducted in strict accordance with the principles of the denomination, and are making fair progress Much work on the church has been among the poor and less educated classes when e chiefly their ministers have been taken."

Short Peach and Apple Crop.

Just about one-fourth of the average crop of peaches and one-third the normal crop of apples will be gathered this year in Pennsylvania, according to information received at the Department of Agriculture, at Harrisburg.

It is expected by the department officials that more definite information will be at hand in the next two or three weeks.

State Zoologist Surface estimates that the loss to the apple growers this year will amount to $1,000,000. "This will be due mostly to the coddling moth," said Professor Surface. "The inspectors of the department say that nearly 95 per cent of the apples of the state have been stung or are wormy. The drought is responsible for some of the shortage to the apple crop but the moths have damaged most of the apples that did develop."

Built 12,843 New Homes.

Pennsylvanians have been saving money despite the recent panic, which fact is shown by the reports of the building and loan associations of the State for 1908 to the Banking Department, at Harrisburg. Reports made public on Friday, last, show total assets of $158,510,745, an increase over 1907, of $11,595,145. The total receipts were $81,873,764, and total number of shareholders, 389,446, an increase over 1907 of 14,496.

A total of 12,843 homes were built or purchased in 1908. This was a decrease of 1244.

Report on Crops.

Bradstreet's weekly report presents the following analysis on the crop situation in the several states:

Weather conditions have made for improvement this week. Warm, dry weather in the west has made for good crop growth, while the eastern drought has been broken by rain, and some crop-growing parts of Texas have been helped by a rainstorm, which, however, did much damage along the coast. North and central Texas, however, report moisture needed.

Winter wheat harvesting, threshing and marketing has been facilitated by good weather. The harvest is general, with threshing returns fully equal to early optimistic estimates. Farmers seem willing to sell at $1 or better, but hesitate when the price drops below that point. Central and western Kansas has a larger wheat crop than earlier expected. Movement as a whole is still below last year, but high premiums at western markets are being reduced, while spot wheat is still scarce at the east. Good reports come from wheat in eastern Washington.

Spring-wheat reports are still almost uniformly good, extreme hot weather experienced for a few days this week did not do any damage, and close to a record yield is expected at the harvest, which begins August 5 to 10.

Corn reports are more cheerful than seemed possible two weeks ago. Excessive rains and floods did not do all the damage feared in the lowlands, though some loss was undoubtedly suffered. Southern corn crop reports are better. Oats crop reports are good, and a large hay crop is being cut in the west. Cotton-crop reports point to improvement, except in parts of Texas which need rain badly.

The long-continued drought in the middle Atlantic and New England states, which reduced the size of the hay crop and injured vegetables, potatoes and small fruits, has been broken by rain. Considerable damage has, however, been already suffered in the vicinity of New York by truck and fruit interests.

The pressure of new wheat is causing high premiums on the active wheat to be shaded at the west, but eastern markets record little influence yet from the July movement, which has been retarded by early unfavorable weather. New York July is slightly higher on the week, while September is 3½ cents off, but at Chicago July is 10½ cents lower and September 4 cents off. Spot cash wheat is fully 5 cents lower at New York and quoted at $1.40, while August cash wheat is 20 cents lower. Supplies are scant in all positions, and crop and supply prospects at home and abroad do not show much prospect of an immediate return to old low levels. Farmers in the west are said to be refusing below $1. Cash corn is scarce, receipts light, and nearby deliveries are 1½ @ 2½ cents higher, despite excellent crop prospects. Oats are 1½ @ 2 cents lower on better crop reports.

Send for This Free Bulletin.

The Pennsylvania State College has issued a bulletin giving full information about the courses of study offered in the School of Agriculture and Experiment Station. It describes the work required in the seven four-years' courses and the two-years' course and makes interesting reading for any one who wishes to know the kind of training that is given young men who want to become expert farmers, or teachers or experimenters A study of the pages of this bulletin is convincing that the instruction is most practical. A young man fitted for entrance to college usually selects one of the four years' courses. The two years' course is designed for those who want instruction in agriculture but have not time or opportunity to fit themselves for a full college course or else do not see their way clear to spend four years in college. The two years' course can be taken without any entrance examinations.

Last year the School of Agriculture enrolled 108 men in the freshman class, 55 men in the sophomore, 25 in the junior, and 16 in the senior. The enrollment in the two years' course was 40. Ninety persons entered the winter courses of twelve weeks.

The bulletin is free. It gives the dates for the beginning of all courses, including the winter courses and "farmers' week." Ask for the "May Bulletin," addressing the School of Agriculture and Experiment Station, State College, Pa.

Of Interest to Women.

The feminine head of the family often wishes that right at that moment she could get a bit of information on some domestic matter. Often she would give a great deal to have the receipe for some toothsome dish. If she had the pattern she would make for herself or some other member of the family a bit of feminine gear in the newest and prettiest fashion. The Famous Kumiss.

Kumiss is a valuable beverage for use in the sick-room. Heat one quart of milk to seventy-five degrees Fahrenheit, add one and one half tablespoonfuls of sugar, and one fourth of a yeast cake dissolved in one tablespoonful of lukewarm water. Fill sterilized bottles to within one and one half inches of the top. Cork, and shake. Place the bottles inverted, where they may remain at a temperature of seventy degrees Fahrenheit for ten hours; then put in the ice-box or a cold place, and let stand forty-eight hours, shaking occasionally, to prevent the cream from clogging the mouth of the bottle, It is refreshing and nourishing.—Woman's Home Companion for August.

Fully Appreciated.

Raymond, aged five, returned from Sunday-school in a state of evident excitement. He strutted around the room as if about to burst with importance. The sympathetic eye of his mother was not slow to observe this.

"What's the matter, Raymond?" she asked.

"Oh, mother," exclaimed the small boy, his eyes sparkling, "the superintendent said something awful nice about me in his prayer this morning."

"What did he say?"

"He said, "Oh, Lord, we thank Thee for food and Raymond."—Woman's Home Companion for August.

For Investors.

Many men save part of their earnings and are then puzzled how to invest their savings. The savings banks are safe, but the interest rate seems low. Some investments offer big returns, but the risk may be great. Cough Caution

Never, positively never poison your lungs. If you cough—even from a simple cold only—you should always heal, soothe, and ease the irritated bronchial tubes. Don't blindly suppress it with a stupefying poison. It's strange how some things finally come about. For twenty years Dr. Shoop has constantly warned people not to take cough mixtures or prescriptions containing Opium, Chloroform, or similar poisons. And now—a little late though—Congress says "Put it on the label if poisons are in your Cough Mixture." Good! Very good! Hereafter for this very reason mothers, and others, should insist on having Dr. Shoop's Cough Cure. No poison marks on Dr. Shoop's labels—and none in the medicine, else it must by law be on the label. And it's not only safe, but it is said to be by those that know it best, a truly remarkable cough remedy. Take no chance then, particularly with your children. Insist on having Dr. Shoop's Cough Cure. Compare carefully the Dr. Shoop package with others and note the difference. No poison marks there! You can always be on the safe side by demanding

"The Blood is The Life."

Science has never gone beyond the above simple statement of scripture. But it has illuminated that statement and given it a meaning ever broadening with the increasing breadth of knowledge. When the blood is "bad" or impure it is not alone the body which suffers through disease. The brain is also clouded, the mind and judgement are effected, and many an evil deed or impure thought may be directly traced to the impurity of the blood. Foul, impure blood can be made pure by the use of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, It enriches and purifies the blood thereby curing, pimples, blotches, eruptions and other cutaneous affections, as eczema, tetter, or salt-rheum, hives and other manifestations of impure blood.

In the cure of scrofulous swellings, enlarged glands, open eating ulcers, or old sores, the "Golden Medical Discovery" has performed the most marvelous cures. In cases of old sores, or open eating ulcers, it is well to apply to the open sores Dr. Pierce's All-Healing Salve, which possesses wonderful healing potency when used as an application to the sores in conjunction with the use of "Golden Medical Discovery" as a blood cleansing constitutional treatment. If your druggist don't happen to have the "All-Healing Salve" in stock, you can easily procure it by inclosing fifty-four cents in postage stamps to Dr. R. V. Pierce, 663 Main St., Buffalo, N. Y., and it will come to you by return post. Most druggists keep it as well as the "Golden Medical Discovery."

You can't afford to accept any medicine of unknown composition as a substitute for "Golden Medical Discovery," which is a medicine OF KNOWN COMPOSITION, having a complete list of ingredients in plain English on its bottle-wrapper, the same being attested as correct under oath.

Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets regulate and invigorate stomach, liver and bowels.

Forty Playgrounds by The Sea.

This is seashore time

The dog days call to the worker in home, office, and mil and the answer brings up thoughts of the many resorts beside the sea where comfort, recreation, and pleasure alike await the coming of the holiday-maker.

Along the shores of New Jersey from Cape May to Sandy Hook lie forty beaches, each offering delights for outings long or short and each easily accessible by the splendid train service of the Pennsylvania Railroad.

Atlantic City, with its myriad attractions for young and old, needs no introduction, for its charms are known from the Atlantic to the Pacific.

Cape May, for a century the summering place of satisfied thousands of seekers after cool breezes, fine bathing, and the refined amusements of the seaside, is more attractive than ever in its new life.

Ocean City, Wildwood, Sea Isle City with their smaller neighbors, Anglesea, Holly Beach, Wildwood Crest, Avalon, and Stone Harbor, afford summer pleasure to thousands.

To the north lie Beach Haven, Seaside Park, Island Heights and the other resorts about Barnegat Bay, where the lover of fishing and sailing finds the choicest sport.

Asbury Park, Ocean Grove, Spring Lake, Long Branch, Sea Girt, Point Pleasure, Allenhurst, Elberon, and Belmar on the Upper Coast where the country meets the sea right on the beach, appeal with mighty force to the vacationist.

Any Pennsylvania Railroad Ticket Agent will be glad to give full information regarding excursion rates, time of trains and arrange your outing whether it be for a day, a week or the whole summer.

SOY BEANS FOR FORAGE.

Experiments Show That the Grain Has Many Advantages.

Many questions have been asked about the value of the soy bean as compared with cowpeas as a forage crop. The Tennessee experiment station at Knoxville, Tenn., has conducted many experiments with the soy bean. From its bulletin we learn that the soy bean produces more grain than the cowpea, whether it is pastured off by hogs or whether the grain is thrashed and ground. As a hay or grain crop the soy bean matures earlier than the cowpea by several weeks and would therefore appear to be a safer crop to grow in the north. Another advantage of the soy bean is that it grows with a straight upright habit and can be seeded in drills so as to give thorough cultivation the same as fodder corn. When planted with corn the cowpeas are better because they climb to some extent up on the cornstalks, while the soy beans are not climbers at all. It is also said that cowpea hay is more easily cured by common methods than the vines of the bean; also a small second crop will grow if the cowpea vines are cut for hay early in the season, while there is no particular growth of this kind from the soy beans. On the other hand, the soy beans are hardier than the cowpeas. They will even stand a light frost, which would kill the cowpeas. They will germinate and grow in cooler weather than the cowpeas can endure. It is easier to cut soy beans with a mower because of their upright growth and because of the fact that they ripen nearly all together. As grain producers soy beans largely excel the cowpeas. Some of the better varieties yield over thirty bushels of grain to the acre in addition to the vines or straw.

PORTABLE FRAME FOR DRYING.

Shallow planting of the seed has given better results than deep, one to four inches being better than deeper. One-half bushel of seed is recommended as a fair amount for planting in rows and one and one-half for broadcast drilling. When planted in rows, as will be most satisfactory in the north, one deep cultivation is given, the same as for corn, and afterward shallow culture and plenty of it. Harvesting the crop is comparatively easy. It can be easily cut with a mower. It is well to cut early, while the vines are very green, so as to avoid shattering the leaves and the beans from their pods. Trials have been made of cutting the soy bean vines with both corn and wheat harvesters, but this has not proved satisfactory. The vines are hard to cut in the ordinary way. In the south, and especially during wet seasons, it has been necessary to use one of the frames shown in the illustrations. These hollow frames of poles or boards are set up as shown and the soy bean vines piled around them. This permits a circulation of air under and through the pile and helps greatly in drying out the vines.

Disease In Fruit Trees.

Not long ago the Maine experiment station purchased sixty apple trees from a leading New York nurseryman. The package in which they were shipped bore a tag stating that the orchard from which they came had been officially inspected and found free from disease. Three out of the sixty trees, or 5 per cent of the shipment, had well developed crown galls upon them. This experience indicates that every orchardist should very carefully inspect all stock. All trees showing evidence of crown gall should be either returned to the shipper or burned and future orders placed with nurserymen who can and will furnish trees free from disease. Under no conditions should trees be planted which show growths of this kind. Crown gall also affects peaches, plums and pears.

FROM TOWN TO COUNTRY.

How a Lawyer and His Family Built Up a Profitable Business.

This is the story of a professional man whose longing for the freedom of country life led him at the age of thirty-six to abandon the city for the farm. Unfortunately the record of his early struggles is very incomplete. That these were severe is attested by the fact that the owner and his family, with a little hired labor, have cleared seventy-six acres of heavily timbered land, built a comfortable home, with substantial barn, dairy house, silo and poultry houses, and have developed under trying conditions one of the best paying farms in the country. In 1906 the gross income of this farm was about $5,000. It is considerably larger now.

The farm in question is on the west side of Puget sound, at the base of the Olympic mountains. In Oregon. The products of the farm are butter, eggs, poultry and a small quantity of fresh pork. These are carried to market twelve miles over a fairly good macadam road by team once a week. So careful is the owner of this farm of the market he has made that he has not once failed to deliver his products on his regular market day during the past twelve years.

Since this farm has been brought to its present profitable state by the joint efforts of every member of the household it is proper to say that when the family moved to the farm in 1887 it consisted of man and wife, three boys and three girls, the eldest child being a boy of thirteen. The only labor ever hired on this farm before the first son entered an agricultural college was a woodchopper for less than three months in 1886 to help to do the first clearing, two carpenters for two weeks in building the house in 1887 and other assistants for miscellaneous pieces of work costing not over $100 during the entire eighteen years up to the fall of 1905. The father and the three sons have done the farm work, milked the cows and made the butter. The household duties have been systematically discharged by the mother and daughters, and for several years the mother and one of the daughters have run most of the poultry business, another daughter has reared the calves, while the third daughter has kept the books of the establishment.

Readers may learn the details of this farmer's work by getting from the United States department of agriculture farmer's bulletin No. 355.

Be Good to Old Apple Trees.

Old apple trees can be brought back to fruitfulness by spreading a thick coat of rich rotted manure around the tree and plowing it under. If ground cannot be plowed fork it under. The next thing to do is to cut out all dead branches, all cross limbs and suckers growing around the base of tree. These take up the sap which should go into the fruit. The next thing to be done is to scrape off the old dead bark, then wash with strong lye soapy water. Use a stiff brush to cleanse the bark. Ashes from hard wood may be used in place of soap. Various tree washes have been recommended, but there is probably nothing better than good homemade soft soap thinned with just enough warm water to make a good suds. If the manure is of poor quality about one peck of a complete animal bone fertilizer should be spread around a medium sized tree and two pecks around a large tree. Spread it on top of the plowed sod and hoe it in. In November another dressing of rotted manure should be spread around each tree and worked into the soil.

Many an old apple, pear, peach and cherry tree that is supposed to be worthless needs only good culture and sufficient plant food of the right quality to be brought back into full bearing.

Cattle should not be pastured in the orchard. They pack the sod so solid as to prevent a full supply of moisture reaching the tree roots, and they graze the grass so close as to afford no protection to the roots from the hot sun and drying winds.

Try this method with the old fruit tree. This work may be done any time this month, the earlier the better.

Bumblebees and Butterflies In Clover.

The bumblebee is a friend of the farmer, and so is the butterfly. In sections where clover seed crops are depended upon the value of the bumblebee as an agent in fertilizing the clover blooms is fully appreciated. A knowledge should be had of the useful as well as the destructive insects which would prove that the farmer has quite as many good insect friends as he has destructive ones. The clover in the illustration is the red species. It is a favorite with the butterfly.

BUNCH OF RED CLOVER.

Farmers' Families In This Country.

It is estimated that there are about 7,000,000 farmers' families in the United States today, taking the word farmer in its broadest sense and including all families living in the open country.

The Wars of Our Country

XXI.—War of 1812
Second Year

By Albert Payson Terhune

THE second year of the war opened with another attempt to invade Canada. Three American armies were massed at various points for this purpose. Of the three the army of the west, under General William Harrison, was the only one to accomplish great results. The British held not only Canada, but Michigan, and under General Proctor they began the year by attacking the nearest American strongholds. Their Indian allies massacred prisoners and committed other atrocities that roused the whole west to fury and made thousands of formerly indifferent men enlist in the United States army.

Before the end of the summer, however, Harrison had retaken Michigan, killed Tecumseh and broken up the Indian federation and chased Proctor far into the Canadian woods, demolishing his army. The northwest was thus restored to the United States and was safe from further invasion.

While all this was happening in the west General Dearborn, with the "army of the center," had taken up a position on the Niagara river and after capturing Fort George at the river's mouth drove the British before them into Canada, but accomplished comparatively little. Dearborn retired in August, and General Wilkinson, another Revolutionary veteran, succeeded him as commander in chief. Wilkinson fought one or two indecisive battles, tried to take Montreal, failed and went soon after into winter quarters. The same autumn the last American forces were driven out of Canada.

In the far south, meantime, the tribe of Creek Indians had risen against the whites and massacred all they could lay hands on. But General Andrew Jackson with about 2,000 men swept down upon the Indians, chased them into their own country, inflicted fearful punishment and forced them to beg for peace.

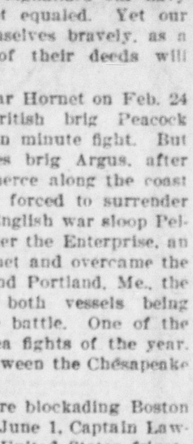
On sea the continuous list of victories that had so signalized our navy in 1812 were not equaled. Yet our sailors bore themselves bravely, as a brief chronicle of their deeds will show.

Our sloop of war Hornet on Feb. 24 captured the British brig Peacock after a hot fifteen minute fight. But the United States brig Argus, after preying on commerce along the coast of England, was forced to surrender in battle to the English war sloop Pelican. A little later the Enterprise, an American ship, met and overcame the Boxer, just beyond Portland, Me., the commanders of both vessels being killed during the battle. One of the most dramatic sea fights of the year, however, was between the Chesapeake and the Shannon.

The British were blockading Boston harbor when, on June 1, Captain Lawrence sailed the United States frigate Chesapeake out to sea. She was at once attacked by the British frigate Shannon. The artillery duel raged furiously for a few minutes. Then part of the Chesapeake's rigging was shot away and she became unmanageable, backing awkwardly into the Shannon. Her torn rigging and her anchor became enmeshed with the other frigate's ropes, and she lay helpless, swept by the Shannon's merciless cannonade. Brave Lawrence fell to the deck, wounded unto death. As he was carried below he gasped out:

"Don't give up the ship!"

But even as he died the British boarded the Chesapeake, rushed over the blood soaked decks and forced the Americans to surrender. Down came the stars and stripes from the masthead, and the ensign of England was hoisted in its place. This crushing defeat was a severe blow to America's hopes, and England's naval supremacy seemed restored.



"DON'T GIVE UP THE SHIP!"

At about this time England, despairing of easy victory, declared her willingness to let the war end. George III., king of Great Britain, was hopelessly insane, and the reins of government were in the hands of his eldest son, the prince regent. The prince regent intimated that he would listen to overtures for peace. President Madison replied that he would gladly consent if the "impressing" of American seamen on British ships should be forever discontinued and other differences satisfactorily settled. But England would not agree to this, and the peace plan fell through.

Wanted to Know His Name.

"Is this the automobile registration department of the state of Ohio?" The voice over the phone was flutelike and sweet.

"It is," replied the office man.

"Do you have records of the numbers of all the machines in Ohio?"

"Of all that are registered, yes."

"Can you refer to any particular number without a great deal of trouble?"

"It takes only a few moments."

"Can you tell me who owns machine No. umpsteen thousand and umpsteen?" Only she gave the actual number of the machine.

"Just hold the phone a moment." The office man returned in less than a minute. "The machine is owned by Mr. So-and-so of Cleveland," he said, then hastened to inquire: "Is there any trouble about it? An accident perhaps."

"Oh, no," said the sweet voice. "The machine has been in front of Miss ——'s home in East Broad, next door, every Sunday evening for several months, and I was just curious to know who was calling upon her. Ever so much obliged." And the receiver went up.—Ohio State Journal.

His Nightcap Privilege.

Among the many strange privileges granted by English sovereigns to their subjects probably the most remarkable was the permission given to the Earl of Sussex by Queen Mary to wear his nightcap, or even two nightcaps, if he so wished, in her royal presence. The earl was a victim of colds in the head, which, like the law, are no respecters of persons, and as he considered catarrh in the head too heavy a price to pay for loyalty he petitioned the queen for permission to wear his nightcap in her presence.

The patent conceding this unique privilege is one of the most amusing in royal annals. It runs thus: "Know ye that we do give to our beloved and trusty cousin and counselor, Henry, earl of Sussex, Viscount Fitzwalter and lord of Egremund and Purnell, license and pardon to wear his cap or nightcap or any two of them, at his pleasure, as well in our presence as in the presence of any other person or persons within this realm or any other place in our dominions wheresoever, during his life, and these our letters shall be sufficient warrant in his behalf."

About Matches.

John Walker, an English chemist, was experimenting in 1827 with an inflammable mixture for use on shipboard. One day Walker happened to rub a stick dipped in this mixture across a table. There was a report—the stick took fire, and because John Walker was no fool the match was born. The match's inventor put his wonderful invention on the market in April, 1827. The Walker match was as big as a lead pencil, and it cost a shilling a box. Because it could only be lighted by drawing it through a piece of sandpaper folded in two the Holden match supplanted it in 1833. The Holden was a lucifer. It ignited more easily than the Walker, so it put the Walker out of business. Sweden is today the home of the match industry. Sweden exports annually about 2,000,000,000 boxes of incomparable matches. But there is no statue to John Walker.—Exchange.

The Trinket Worm.

Among the novelties in nature is a small worm, called the trinket worm, characterized by this peculiarity, which gives rise to its name:

On the leaves of a wild vine, called the trinket vine, is found a small worm, which looks at first like a small piece of white thread and is almost motionless. If the leaf be taken off and placed under a glass case in the room this little thread will in the short space of twenty-four hours grow into a good sized caterpillar, beautifully colored and studded with golden spots. When matured it will climb up the glass, fasten one of its extremities to the glass roof, and, leaving the other hanging in the air, will curl itself into a variety of forms, presenting exquisite patterns for gold trinkets, such as earrings, brooches and clasps, changing from time to time in great variety, whence its name is derived.

What Fried Liver Is Good For.

A guest at an Atchison home came for three days and was still there at the end of five weeks. "I like all kinds of meat," she remarked one day as she passed her plate for the third helping, "but fried liver." That night there was fried liver for supper, fried liver the next day for breakfast, dinner and supper, and the next day, when the guest was asked to have fried liver, she packed her trunk and went home.—Atchison Globe.

His Bad Break.

"Oh, yes, I saw the man in the moon when I was a little girl," she said coquettishly.

"He must be pretty old by now, don't you think?" he remarked thoughtlessly.—Exchange.

The First English Bible.

The first complete Bible printed in English was issued in 1535 without any publisher's name on it. It was the work of Miles Coverdale, who incorporated, with revisions, Tyndale's books of the New Testament of the Pentateuch and of Jonah and for the rest translated from German and Latin versions. It was thus only partly original and in that part just a translation of a translation. No perfect copy of this Bible is known to exist.

Coverdale's Bible is called both "the treacle Bible" and "the bug Bible," from two curious renderings. The passage in Jeremiah which we now read, "Is there no balm in Gilead?" is rendered, "Is there no more treacle in Galahad?" And in the Psalms, "Thou shalt not be afraid of the terrors by night," reads "Thou shalt not nede to be afrayed for any bugges by night." In the Ninth Psalm, "Put them in fear, O Lord," is rendered by Coverdale as, "Set a schoolmaster over them."

Undue Haste.

No doubt Dennis apreciated to the full the excellent qualities of Celia, his wife, but he occasionally indulged in a sigh for the liberty of his years of single blessedness. "Yis, 'tis a good wife she makes me," he said to a returned traveler during whose absence the wedding had occurred. "And we was coorting siventeen years. Aileen an' all o' the rest said 'twas time I married or Terry Leahy would be getting the prize away from me."

"Well, man, you've no regrets, I hope?" said the friend, who had just enjoyed a delicious supper at the hands of Celia. "She's a fine woman."

"Didn't I tell you that?" said Dennis impatiently. "The only thought I iver have is wance in awhile whin it comes over me that I might 've waited another year an' still have got her, for Terry was not near so high in her esthimation, after all, as thim women made out t' me.

"A man in love is always hurrying, hurrying, ye mind."—Youth's Companion.

Prevaricating Figures.

Those to whom the mathematical mind has not been given will appreciate the fun an Irishwoman, Mrs. La Touche of Harristown, has with numbers in "The Letters of a Noblewoman."

"I do hate sums," Mrs. La Touche confesses to a friend. "There is no greater mistake than to call arithmetic an exact science. There are permutations and aberrations discernible to minds entirely noble, like mine; subtle variations which ordinary accountants fail to discern; hidden laws of numbers which it requires a mind like mine to perceive.

"For instance, if you add a sum from the bottom up, and then again from the top down, the result is always different."

Enough to Scare Any One.

While out walking with her papa and mamma one day Florence, aged four, ran some little distance ahead. As she got near a mule hitched to a farmer's wagon the animal began to bray. She wheeled instantly and, running to her mother as fast as she could go, said in round eyed astonishment, "Oh, mamma, sumfin' said sumfin'."—Delineator.

A Mean Revenge.

"You seem to be considerably elated over something."

"Yes. I have a friend who is almost stone deaf. I took him out home with me last night, and my wife had to sit there all the evening and merely nod and smile while he talked."—Chicago Record-Herald.

Beware of Ointments for Catarrh that Contain Mercury.

As mercury will surely destroy the sense of smell and completely derange the whole system when entering it through the mucous surfaces. Such articles should never be used except on prescriptions from reputable physicians, as the damage they will do is ten fold to the good you can possibly derive from them. Hall's Catarrh Cure manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, O., contains no mercury, and is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. Better Not Get Dyspepsia

If you can help it. Kodol prevents Dyspepsia, by effectually helping Nature to Relieve Indigestion. But don't trifle with Indigestion.

A great many people who have trifled with indigestion, have been sorry for it—when nervous or chronic dyspepsia resulted, and they have not been able to cure it.

Use Kodol and prevent having Dyspepsia.

Everyone is subject to indigestion. Stomach derangement follows stomach abuse, just as naturally and just as surely as a sound and healthy stomach results upon the taking of Kodol.

When you experience sourness of stomach, belching of gas and nauseating fluid, bloated sensation, gnawing pain in the pit of the stomach, heart burn (so-called), diarrhoea, headaches, dullness or chronic tired feeling—you need Kodol. And then the quicker you take Kodol—the better. Eat what you want, let Kodol digest it.

Ordinary pepsin "dyspepsia tablets," physics, etc., are not likely to be of much benefit to you, in digestive ailments. Pepsin is only a partial digester—and physics are not digesters at all.

Kodol is a perfect digester. If you could see Kodol digesting every particle of food, of all kinds, in the glass test-tubes in our laboratories, you would know this just as well as we do.

Nature and Kodol will always cure a sick stomach—but in order to be cured, the stomach must rest. That is what Kodol does—rests the stomach, while the stomach gets well. Just as simple as A, B, C.
